BULK RATE U.S. POSTAGE PAID CARMEL, CA Permit No. 149

OUR 73RD YEAR, NO. 11

March 19, 1987

LOSS OF the panoramic vista during the late afternoon from the Martin Road property above Mission Trails Park and adjacent to Flanders Mansion and the Rowntree Arboretum is one of the concerns expressed by people opposing the city's sale of that acreage as well as the Flanders Mansion. The Carmel Planning Commission will review the proposed sale of the properties at 3:20 p.m., Wednesday, March 25 in Carmel City Council Chambers. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Flanders Mansion sale sure to spark debate

By NANCY HILLS

TO START a debate with longtime Carmel area residents one usually only has to say two words: "Flanders Mansion."

That's been the situation ever since 1972 when the city purchased the 14.9 acres with a 4,000 square foot mansion located off Martin Road.

Now a part of Mission Trails Park, it is once again the official subject of debate for city government while citizen groups have already lined up to take sides with petitions in hand.

The focus of the activity will be the upcoming Carmel Planning Commission meeting 3:20 p.m. Wednesday, March 25 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

The planning commission will then consider whether the sale of a 1.43-acre portion of the property along with the house and the subsequent subdivision and development requires an environmental impact report.

It must also determine if the sale is in keeping with the city's general plan.

The commission must also decide if the general plan should be amended to allow the rezoning of the parkland to residential (R-1) so it could be converted to buildable lots.

The action includes a parcel commonly referred to as the Martin Way property, a little more than 2-acre meadowland adjoining the southeast edge of the Flanders' 1.43 acres. The meadow has a view through park trees that incorporates Carmel Mission and Point Lobos.

The Carmel City Council voted in December that Flanders Mansion with the surrounding 1.43 acre section and the Martin Way parcel were surplus city properties and the process to sell the acreage was set into motion.

Councilman Bob Evans stated that the money from the sale could be used for other city projects such as the beach restoration, parking garage or acquisition of vacated Crocker Bank building as a library annex.

Since the sale process began, three city advisory boards — the Forestry Commission, Recreation Commission and Arboretum Committee — have voted to recommend against selling the property.

Recreation Commissioner Robert D'Isidoro said that the commission voted to retain the property as a part of their direction to keep open space in the city for public use.

The pending decision to sell has already generated a multi-page petition, on file with the planning department, with 274 signatures to retain the property, 143 for the sale and 57 who signed without stating a preference.

•

WHAT TO do with the large home, built in 1924, has been at the center of the ongoing controversy about the property.

The house is in need of extensive repairs to bring it up to current safety standards, including basic structural and seismic requirements.

A November 1984 estimate puts the cost of those repairs at $359,032. The current condition of the structure precludes insuring the house so the city cannot use it as a public building.

It is currently leased by three tenants, including artist John Cunningham and his Carmel Art Institute.

Since 1972, when the city purchased the entire 14.9 acres for $275,000, many uses for the property have been proposed, including an American Youth Hostelry. Other proposals to subdivide the land for up to 58 units have been denied in the past.

The fate of the Rowntree Arboretum, located next to the mansion and above the driveway, has also been a subject of concern for the Arboretum Committee. Members of the organization have been active in petitioning against the sale of the property. The arboretum's boundaries have been in some dispute during the discussion of the sale.

In a memorandum from Harriet Rowntree,

Save a life

Dear Editor:

As Mayor of the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea, I, Clint Eastwood, urge you to save a life. Centers throughout California are reporting shortages of blood.

You have two opportunities to give.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea employees will be donating blood Thursday, March 19 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the American Legion Hall located on Eighth and Dolores.

On Saturday, March 28, the Soroptimists International will join 2,500 other Soroptimists for a one-day "Part of My Heart" drive for blood donations. Sixty-two clubs of the Sierra Pacific Region of Soroptimist International of the Americas are working together to help relieve this shortage.

The Blood Center at Community Hospital will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on March 28. Professional staff will be available to help you. Please contact Jeanne Brehmer or Joan DeMers to add your name to the list of doners.

How flexible?

Dear Editor:

As the owner of an upscale shop in Carmel, I see a pattern taking shape that I'm concerned about: Four ice cream parlors and a video rental store among our existing T-shirt and many bakeries.

I sometimes walk on Ocean Avenue and it's unbelievable, nearly everyone is munching on a cookie or sweet roll, a dish of ice cream, or a can of pop. If this is what Carmel wants, fine. If not — take notice.

I'm appreciative of the fact that the mayor and planning commission is flexible but to what degree?

Ask the citizens

Dear Editor:

With regard to the Harrison Memorial Library Annex controversy, I would propose that the issue be determined by the people in the same manner as the Scenic Road "walkway" poll was conducted by the mayor with the approval of the city council.

There are worthy arguments on both sides of the issue as whether to build the annex on the southwest corner of Sixth and Lincoln street or acquire the presently vacated Crocker Bank building located on the northeast corner of Mission Street. From a logistical point of view, with its close proximity to the library, the "Pine Inn" annex appears to have an attractive advantage, but there are negative aspects to this location as well. For example, the necessary underground parking which would almost certainly create a getting-in, getting-out traffic problem in an already busy intersection.

All costs considered about equal, I tend to favor the bank location not simply because it is there and available, has existing parking areas and easily convertible to library conformity, but makes good sense and prudent long-term planning.

Not to suggest that every major issue brought before the city council should be tested by the citizenry, in contrast to the Scenic Road walkway which dealt with visitors and locals alike, this matter is of vital concern to the people of Carmel and ought to be judged by them.

As one who has enjoyed the privilege of using the splendid services of the Harrison Memorial Library for some 35 years, I respectfully submit that the city council consider the merits of undertaking a survey similar to the Scenic Road walkway poll of Carmel's registered voters to determine their attitude. Such a democratic endeavor would not only be in the public interest but the outcome might also serve as a guideline to our elected officials at city hall where the final decisions must be made.

Emphasize abstinence

Dear Editor:

I couldn't help but notice and be concerned that the parents were left out of the educating of our children on the subject of AIDS, in the Feb. 26 issue. Who's children are they? Send the parents the information on AIDS.

Also, I was disappointed and deeply concerned that the main and most important emphasis was not on abstinence and a commitment to abstinence until marriage, which would be the quickest cure for AIDS. To tell our children and our teens that it's OK to say no to sex. That they still are cool and all right! That a commitment to abstinence until marriage will give them dignity and also is very honorable for their own self esteem. This I wish the educators would consider!

Bring some value

Dear Editor:

At the city council meeting Feb. 2 a gentleman got up to speak wanting council member Elinor Laiolo and Mayor Clint Eastwood to step down and not vote on the beach restoration phase II because they live close to scenic drive area.

First of all the restoration and walkway had already been voted in January and passed 4 to 1.

Secondly, I resent very much this attempt to silence a council member and our mayor from voting on anything. They were voted in by us on a 3 to 1 majority.

We have a better way - if they do not do a good job in office they will be voted out, but up till now they are doing A-OK,

How about bringing something of value to the council meetings instead of tearing down our city?

Stop whining

Dear Editor:

What is all this whining about the "softening" of the General Plan? (Pine Cone Letters to the Editor, Mar. 5.)

Many of us not so easily forget the Charlotte Townsend administration and the railroading gang. They also brought us "Di & Bri" and a college-course dose of gerrymandering unparalleled in this town.

General Plan, indeed! It wasn't even a Colonel Plan...more like a Private Plan.

Cherish our heritage

Dear Editor:

I have lived in Carmel for 15 years. Last Friday I had the most wonderful experience. I was taken for a ride to the Flanders Estate and saw the most beautiful sight. In fact I never knew that this place existed. The view from the open meadow by Martin Way was so beautiful; that it literally took my breath away.

The house still standing seemed to me to be just perfect for the setting, which seemed like a picture.

Why must this beautiful place be changed? For more houses? We do not have many places like this in Carmel anymore. Let us keep this greenbelt as a cherished heritage for future generations. Sincerely yours,

Olga G. Neri

Reasonable alternative

Dear Editor:

It is apparent from a recent letter to your paper that there is a misconception with regard to widening Highway 1 from Ocean Avenue to the river bridge. One writer states that stips of land will be taken from property owners along Highway 1. This is simply not true as the maps in the Cal Trans EIS clearly show.

The state acquired the land to widen the road many years before the Hatton Canyon Freeway was even thought of. In fact the present freeway south to Carpenter was planned from the very beginning to end up just beyond the bridge but the Carmel city council and others prevented its completion. The state still owns this land, however if property owners have built driveways and encroached upon public property that is their responsibility.

It is interesting that letter writers opposed to widening Highway 1 and would rather desecrate the canyon mostly live south of Ocean and not far from the main road and pick on those who have built homes overlooking Hatton Canyon. It seems a simple case of "Whose ox is getting gored" or "people who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

When Cal Trans made their presentation of the EIS here late last year there was no mention of federal funds. The monies were to come out of California highway funds. The Pine Cone reports that Cal Trans now says that they anticipate 80 percent to be federal funding. Who is trying to deceive who? If this is the case taxpayers from all over have every right to object to spending an extraordinary amount of their federal taxes for a monstrous short freeway extension that goes nowhere when there are many other projects in the state more deserving of funds. This is so apparent when there is a reasonable alternative to the Hatton Canyon Freeway that is cost effective.

Gold fever

Dear Editor:

I've ready many complaints in the newspapers about an impasse reached by our regional sewer agency and the Environmental Protection Agency over air quality standards for a new regional sewer plant being built in Marina, but I say I am heartened by the stand made by EPA.

Maybe I'm wrong, but isn't EPA only doing what it was created to do?

In the current political climate there is enormous support for the interests of monetary profit which, when it bumps into a social or environmental stance of power, cries out, "foul, foul, no.... failure, crybaby! Real world!"

That looks like "gold fever" to me.

Greed.

In our case, we have a problem with projections by developers of unnatural population increases in this area which can only happen by the promotion and the sale of the peninsula by these same development interests.

Many of us, a turnover population ourselves, a young community, which hasn't yet established a complete community fabric, but which yet understands that a natural world is our first home and last resort, are clubbed by the inherent attitude of the polical opposition that we are unrealisitic, indulgent and ignorant. "You can't go back to the past."

So in my eyes the EPA is a hero.

(On "gold fever" for a moment; I think our instincts are right about gambling, the fairgrounds thing. It's unfortunate that we have to rely on purely pragmatic considerations, traffic, to make our argument.

Open season?

Dear Editor:

Is there to be an open season once again on our magnificent mountain lions? The California Fish and Game Commission will soon decide whether to reinstate trophy hunting of lions after some 15 years of protection.

Given the fact that their habitat has been steadily decreasing, and that not too long ago the Department of Fish and Game estimated their population at 600, the current figure being bandied about of 4 to 5,000 seems highly exaggerated. Is such a figure being used in order to justify the resumption of hunting?

One of the worst aspects of the proposal is that both male and female lions may be shot, as long as kittens aren't accompanying the female. But what about the female who leaves her kittens behind while she hunts for food? Is she's killed, her young ones will either starve, or turn to easy prey such as livestock, for ordinarily they remain with their mother for up to two years, during which time she teaches them hunting skills.

The way a mountain lion is hunted is particularly revolting: chased pell-mell by hounds until it's exhausted and climbs a tree, after which the mighty hunter stands below the tree and guns down the motionless lion---about as "sporting" as shooting a grazing cow!

The Fish and Game Commission should take into consideration not only the hunters, but the great majority of Californians who disapprove of trophy hunting, especially of our beautiful mountain lions.

Help is on the way

Abuse of senior citizens is a growing problem

By DAVID LELAND
(Last in a series.)

BOB, AN elderly Carmel businessman, had lived with his wife Helen above his store for several years when neighbors noticed they were seeing less of his wife. Bob pointed out that her health was failing and she just didn't get out as much.

A short time later, Helen fell while alone in their apartment and Bob was forced to call for help. She was found unconscious in a pool of blood and urine. Dirty dishes were stacked everywhere and mice scattered about.

When asked what had happened, Bob said he had been "protecting" his wife from being institutionalized because she was becoming increasingly incoherent.

Bob and Helen's story (not their real names) does not stand alone when looking at patterns of elder abuse in Carmel and surrounding areas.

Money and social standing have little to do with this predicament that has health care workers scurrying for solutions. Many times this task begins with educating the public to the prevalence of elder abuse.

"People are incredulous," said Jean Phan, a county adult protective services supervisor, referring to the attitude of most citizens when told of elder abuse in their town. "They are either naive or denying the problem."

Phan's agency investigates all reports of elder abuse in Monterey County. In February her office, with 11 staffers, received five calls of abuse for people 60 and above.

And, while only physical abuse is mandated by state law to be reported to the county by professional caretakers, Phan said ill-treatment also takes the form of psychological, financial/material, violation of rights and denial of basic needs which often goes unreported.

Many times this type of mistreatment becomes melded with family decisions made earlier and the problem can be hard to differentiate, Phan said.

"When there is one type of abuse there is usually another type of abuse going on,"

'People are incredulous,' said Jean Phan, a county adult protective services supervisor, referring to the attitude of most citizens when told of elder abuse in their town. 'They are either naive or denying the problem.'

Phan said. "(But) sometimes the lines are extremely hard to draw. Decisions that were made earlier are no longer appropriate."

Phan said what may start as a cooperative decision, such as giving the caretaker a power of attorney to make medical decisions, may become a source of leverage used against the senior when times become strained.

•

IT IS difficult for health care experts to draw an accurate, simple portrait of an elder abuser, said Sue Appel, adult protective services social worker. This makes their job even tougher.

But Appel said social service workers have narrowed it down somewhat, with the most predictable type of elder abuser being an adult caring for his parent who abused him as a child.

Phan said she has handled cases where the person accused of abusing his sick parent told her he was getting back at his parent for beating him years before.

Phan, who began her career with the county child protective services, said she is beginning to see the same names crop up in reports of elder abuse. These people are now adults and abusing their parents.

This problem is often prolonged as the elder, fearing retaliation from the caregiver, does not report the offense to the social service department or police, Appel said.

ELDER CITIZENS sometimes are led to believe they are helping an "honest" citizen recover money by offering the use of their own money. But after all is said and done the senior citizen often loses money as well as suffering embarrassment by these fraudulent schemes. (Holly McFarland photo.)

"Elders are fearful of losing the caretaker and being put in a home," Appel said.

As a result many elder citizens suffer through years of neglect both physically and mentally — trapped in a situation which can go from bad to worse if unchecked.

Phan gave an example of a 74-year-old woman who had been financially exploited by her 15-year-old grandniece and her adult boyfriend, a county probation violator. When summoned to the home, social service workers found the two had been living with the woman without her permission, while living off her social security checks. She had also been verbally threatened and intimidated when she tried to seek help.

Another picture of elder abuse develops as stress builds up with the caretaker while tending to the needs of the patient over a long period of time. This is particularly noticeable in families who are caring for victims of Alzheimer's disease, Phan said.

As the family watches their loved one begin to deteriorate, they often become frusturated and take out their aggressions on the patient.

But there is help for people who are buckling under with the non-ending burden of providing care with the recent passage of a bill authored by state Sen. Henry Mello.

Under a $50,000 appropriation administered by the state Department of Aging, this bill is designed to provide respite care for a family member or friend, who is the primary caregiver of a frail or elderly person at home.

This is accomplished by bringing a trained person into the home for scheduled periods or by placing the person who needs care in a health facility for short stays.

For more information call 899-2571.

•

THE NEXT type of abuser often knows the victim as a paid caretaker, a friend or neighbor, Phan said. Many times these cases take on the dimensions of a Grade-B movie.

Phan said her agency handled one case in which an elderly woman was being harassed by her 20-year-old son, who was under the influence of drugs and alcohol.

After repeated attacks on her, the woman got a temporary restraining order from the courts, barring her son from the house.

At this point, a "friendly" neighbor approached the woman with an offer to help her out of her financial woes. He knew the woman was only receiving social security checks and was strapped for money.

The neighbor said he would "buy" the woman's house, paying her $300 monthly, while letting her live there. The only catch was that if the woman vacated the house for three months in a row, she would lose her home.

Thinking something was fishy, the woman sought an attorney for advice. Her neighbor recommended a lawyer who turned out to be in cohoots with him. A deal was struck.

From then on the woman lived in constant fear of becoming ill and having to leave the house, thus losing the most valuable thing in her life.

This story had a happy ending, however, with the social services retaining a lawyer who managed to get the contract revoked.

But often the elder is duped in a more subtle fashion as he seeks companionship and help in the form of an aide to help around the house.

The worst way to go about finding help is by advertising in the newspaper, according to Linda Geisenburg, director of social services at the Carmel Foundation. She added that trouble can be compounded if the service is in exchange for free room and board.

There are people who lay in wait for senior citizens who advertise in the paper looking for help, Geisenburg said. Once they are hired, these people begin to pilfer money and jewelry, and sometimes intimidate the elder.

Plus, if there is no salary, the senior cannot evict these people under California lease law, which gives a person up to 90 days to find a new place to live.

"We strongly advise that you pay them at least $1 a week," Geisenburg said.

Furthermore, she said seniors looking for people to work in the home should use an outside agency, such as the Carmel Foundation. The foundation networks with other agencies trying to keep on top of those people who prey on trusting elders.

Other sources for bonafide help are Country Home Care and the Visiting Nurses Association.

•

PERHAPS THE most publicized form of elder abuse comes out of either convalescent hospitals or board and care homes.

This was most recently witnessed by the closure of the Gloria Residential Care Home in Salinas, which lost its license after a patient was taken to the hospital covered in filth and sores, infested with lice and encrusted with his stinking clothes.

It should be noted that the majority of these care centers are operated with a great amount of integrity, but there are some that do not offer sufficient health care.

And it appears that low-income seniors are more apt to experience poor care upon entering a rest home, according to a report by the Monterey County Ombudsman's Project.

In a list of citations compiled by the state Department of Health Services between July 1, 1986 through Dec. 31, 1986, convalescent hospitals which catered principally to MediCal patients posted the highest number of complaints.

Among these was the Monterey Pines Skilled Nursing Facility, which was fined twice in September and once in November for a total of $13,200. Among the complaints was "accepting and retaining patients for whom the facility cannot adequately care."

According to Donna Johnston of the Ombudsman's Project, Monterey Pines is composed of about "80 percent" MediCal patients.

Another hospital with multiple complaints was the Salinas Convalescent Center, which received four complaints on Aug. 19 alone and one more in November. The citation issued in November was the result of a patient's death, and carried with it a $20,000 fine. Johnston said that hospital was "heavy" with MediCal patients.

Health care workers are aware of this problem but are handcuffed to a great extent by the number of hospitals no longer accepting MediCal patients because of the low reimbursment rate.

Hospitals are forced to make up about $30 a day after receiving MediCal compensation. Locally the Carmel Convalescent Hospital last month pulled out of the state's MediCal program.

"I'm using one (hospital) right now that accepts MediCal," Geisenburg said, when asked if she believed that hospitals accepting MediCal patients sometimes offer inferior care. "I wouldn't use it if I didn't have to."

While there is no easy way to eliminate elder abuse, workers at social services are looking to a 1984 law, which makes it a misdemeanor not to report elder abuse by health care professionals, as having some effect on the problem.

But they are not relying solely on the reportage of abuse. In a bill which became effective Feb. 1, the state allotted the county $89,000 for temporary shelter for victims, this provides one more option for elders who need an emergency exit from an abusive situation.

Appel said she felt "optimistic" about the bill, which creates temporary shelter in the county for the victims of abuse or neglect and are a dependent adult.

Since the program began in the county eight people have been placed, Phan said. Under the measure, the county has one bed reserved for a victim of abuse in the Domestic Crisis Center in Salinas and two separate

Planners to consider sale of Flanders Mansion chairwoman of the arboretum committee, the committee recommended demolition of the mansion and retention of the land.

"In spite of a spirit of mutual cooperation, problems have arisen over parking, tenants' dogs, garbage and litter disposal, water use, etc. These problems have only been minor because the residents of the house have been tenants of the city, and not owners of the property," the memoradum states.

Evans explained that he felt "if some really useful purpose that was not an enormous expense to the city" could be found for the house, he could change his mind about the sale.

"I can't quite feel in favor of demolishing the house," he added.

The Martin Way property, Evans said, should be a separate issue from the Flanders property.

"That's not a part of Mission Trails Park and is not used by many people," he said. It's only access is either through the arboretum, Flanders Mansion property or up a steep trail from the park.

•

ALONG WITH numerous letters opposing the sale from Carmel area residents, two attorneys, Joel Franklin and Francis "Skip" Lloyd, have separately written the planning commission outlining their legal arguments on why the development of both pieces of land should be subject to an EIR.

Franklin's letter states he represent a group from Martin Road area, which borders the park. The letter includes specific environmental concerns and outlines the guidelines for California Environmental Quality Act requirements for an EIR.

Franklin, a resident of the Martin Road area, in an intervew with The Carmel Piné Cone said he "is concerned with the impact (of the sale) on the city and environment. I would like to see more working sessions and public input on the property."

A real "grassroots" movement has developed in the past few weeks to stop the sale, he said.

"There's a real sense that this is an important open space in Carmel. It has one of the last open meadowlands with a view in the city."

He added that the addition of homes could "disrupt the whole park," introducing a higher noise level into the area and intruding homes into the interior of the park.

Carmel resident Cindy Lloyd, one of the citizens active in opposing the selling the parkland and Francis Lloyd's sister, said she is "distressed with subdividing any part of Mission Trails Park. I think we should keep the boundaries as they are today."

"Once they sell that property, it's gone forever," she said.

"To get rid of that absolutely gorgeous vista would be a tragedy," Cindy Lloyd said about Martin Way property. "Furthermore, that is one of the last remaining pieces of the old Hatton hayfields that covered the entire area at one time."

Lloyd said she would much rather see the mansion torn down and the land kept in public hands, if that is the choice.

Both Franklin and Cindy Lloyd stated that the view from Martin Way property is probably the last of its kind where people could see the area as the Padres saw it when the Carmel Mission was built.

Environmental issues raised by the letters and the petition include:

- Disturbance of the peace and tranquility of the entire park.
- That the area has been identified as an ecologically sensitive area as well as one of archeological significance.
- The meadowland is the only truly open space left in Carmel-by-the-Sea.
- More homes in the area would increase Carmel's water shortage.
- The proposed sale does not prohibit further subdivisions.
- Disruption of soil, change in topography, drainage and plant life.
- Loss of a wildlife habitat.
- Increased need for services for the homes such as utilities, traffic, circulation and parking.

•

EXPRESSING AN opposing view, former mayor Barney Laiolo said he favors the sale because "first of all, there is no vehicular access without going through the county (Hatton and Martin roads) and the cost to remodel the mansion is ridiculous.

"The city should use the funds to fufill some of the requirements necessary for possible Crocker Bank purchase and building the Sunset garage.

"I also think the amount of land the city now owns is already excessive. Everybody cries they need housing, but the more land the city owns and it is not available for housing.

"The suggestion that the house be razed and the area turned into a park is impractical, especially when you look at Piccadilly Park (on Dolores Street) which has practically no use and it's right in town."

Laiolo added he felt that the arboretum should be saved and the property lines adjusted to keep that intact.

Workshop set for college-bound high schoolers

A COLLEGE planning workshop for college-bound sophomores and juniors and their families will stress the importance of an early start in college planning and attempt to simplify what can be a complicated and time-consuming process.

Speakers will offer plans of action to insure that college-bound students are successfully matched with the right colleges for their educational needs.

Topics to be covered include: setting educational goals, the application/admission process, public versus private colleges, preparing for the SAT tests, costs and financial planning, check lists and deadlines, the essay and interview, campus visits, the student athlete, and physical and learning disabilities.

Speakers include Bill Rand, former Carmel Unified School District superintendent and financial planner with Christopher Weil & Co., Phyllis Stebbins, director of The Reading Game, Monterey, and Oliver White, independent educational consultant with School Search.

This free workshop, sponsored by School Search, a Carmel educational consulting firm, will be held Monday, March 23 at 7:05 p.m. in the lecture forum, Room 102, Monterey Peninsula College, located on Fremont Street and Aguajito, Monterey.

Call School Search, 408-624-2836, for further information and to make reservations, which are recommended.

Career center seeking volunteers

THE COLLEGE/Career Center at Carmel High School is seeking volunteers for next year.

The work involves helping students with their college admissions and career goals at the center located at the school. No previous experience is necessary and all are welcome to participate.

Those interested are invited to attend a planning meeting scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Monday, April 6 at the College/Career Center at the high school or by calling 625-HELP.

Seniors are often unfortunate targets of abuse and fraud residential care homes in Marina and Salinas.

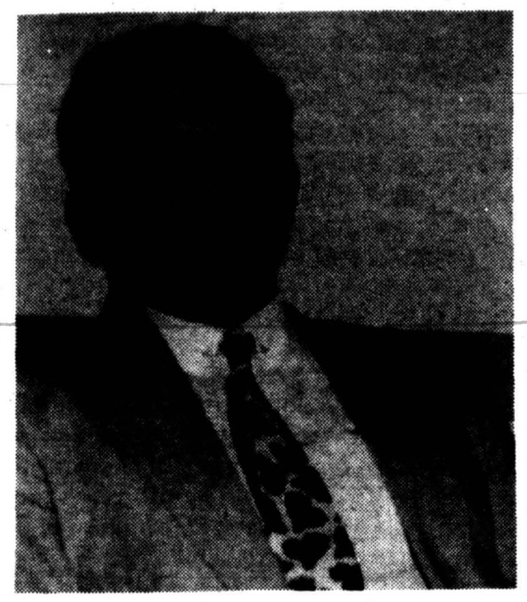
The county social services also operates a 24-hour hotline, which is tied into emergency telephone number 911, with "team" members who respond to abuse emergencies. After evaluating the situation, the social service workers recommend the type of help needed.

Phan added that Monterey County is one of only three counties in the state that has a 24-hour crisis hotline for abuse. The others are Stanislaus and San Joaquin counties, she said.

Seniors should not worry about losing their home if there is a crisis situation. "We don't want to influence the removal of people away from their home," Appel said.

The county this year also formed the Adult Abuse Coordinating Council in an effort to keep support agencies abreast of the latest developments in elder protective care.



LT. DON Fuselier cautions senior citizens against falling for bunco schemes such as the bank examiner con where a person empties his savings only to give it to a "friendly" bank offical who takes it and runs. (David Leland photo.)

Members of the court system, social services, conservators, police agencies, mental health workers and senior supportive services meet the second Thursday of each month for discussions and presentations.

•

BUT SOMETIMES the senior citizen becomes a victim even when he is in apparent good health and has his life under control. This is when the fraud division of the police department enters the picture.

Under any number of schemes, elder residents can be bilked out of anything from a few hundred dollars to their life savings.

"Senior citizens have a tremendous amount of pride," said Lt. Don Fuselier, Carmel police detective. "They want to be independent — the con man knows this."

An example:

Marie Alberson, an 85-year-old widow in Carmel, was working in her yard last year when she was approached by a man who said he would "resurface" the roof of her house.

"It wasn't leaking one bit," she remembered. "But when you're by yourself, you don't want to take any chances."

She signed a contract and wrote Joseph Bishop a check for $400 to do the work. It took him 15 minutes to spray the roof with used motor oil.

And, while the roof looked shiny, black and new, when Alberson's son examined the work a short time later, he saw that his mother had been taken advantage of. The oil did absolutely nothing to stop leaks and would probably wash off with the first rain.

"I didn't know the man from Adam," Alberson said. "I thought it would be a good idea to resurface the roof."

Bishop, now in custody, managed to pull the same scheme on about 20 other victims, Fuselier said, charging as much as $800 for the "work."

While Alberson was cooperative in talking to police about her misfortune, Fuselier said most elder crimes go unreported because the victim feels embarrassed.

Fuselier said the most pressing fraud problem for seniors currently is "fear" tactics employed by some insurance agencies.

While most insurance companies operate on the level, Fuselier said a few get in touch with seniors through mass mailings and try to sell them insurance to supplement their MediCal benefits. But when they need to collect on the premium, they're out of luck.

"When you read the fine print it really doesn't pay you anything," said Geisenburg at the Carmel Foundation, who has posted a warning of this con game outside her office door on the bulletin board.

Other types of crooked schemes Fuselier warns of include:

• The Pigeon Drop. Here the suspect finds a sum of money along with the victim and suggests they put it in a joint bank account. The con man tells the victim to put in some "good faith" money.

The next day when the victim goes to recover the money, he finds that it is gone along with the suspect.

Fuselier said any money found should be turned over to the police immediately.

• The Spanish Handkerchief. Here the suspect also finds money with the victim and suggests that the new-found gain be placed in a handkerchief — he recommends that the victim also place his "good faith" money in the handkerchief.

He then gives the handkerchief to the victim to put in the bank. But when the victim gets to the bank he finds that all there is in the handkerchief is cut-up paper. The suspect had switched an alternate handkerchief for the real money.

• The Bank Examiner. Here, the suspect calls up a senior citizen, posing as a bank official. He tells the victim that the bank is trying to find out if a teller is cheating the bank.

He tells the victim to withdraw a certain amount of money and give it to a man across the street, who is working for the bank. He will count it, apprehend the dishonest teller and return the money to the victim's account that day.

Obviously, the money is never returned to the victim's account. Fuselier said this scheme occurred several months ago in Carmel Valley.

He added that if anyone is contacted by a bank he should look the telephone number up in the phone book and call and verify the information.

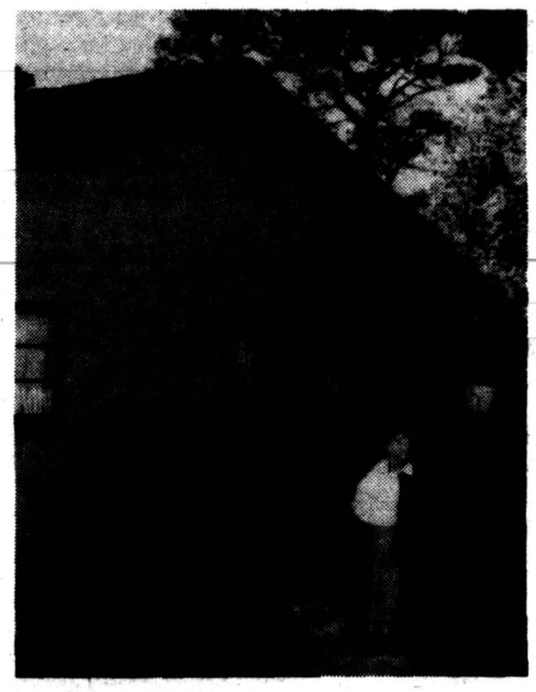
Time after time police are faced with seniors trusting people who in turn take advantage of them.

"There is a reluctance of old people in this town to believe there is anything to worry about," said Det. Pete Poitras, who investigates all crimes in Carmel. "It's Disneyland without rides. It's not the same town it was in 1950."

Poitras advised senior citizens to put their money in a safe deposit box along with other valuables.

"It's amazing how many people have as much cash on hand as they do," Poitras said. This, he added, stems from the Depression era when many banks failed, an experience many seniors remember.

For seniors to avoid trouble with con men, Poitras offers some simple advice: "Beware of something that's too good to be true."



MARIE ALBERSON, 85, points to the roof of her house, which she spent $400 to have "resurfaced" with used motor oil by a con man.

Suspends new developments

City council toughens water use policies

By NANCY HILLS

CONSTRUCTION ON vacant lots of record and pending projects may be allowed, but no other applications which increase water use in the city will be accepted, the Carmel City Council decided Friday.

In a four-hour special meeting March 13, the city council directed staff on water use policy issues and decided the planning commission should immediately stop accepting applications for subdivisions or plans that increase commercial spaces, floor area or building sites.

Applications also will not be accepted for new businesses that would increase water use over the previous business in the same location.

The suspension of applications will be reviewed 180 days from March 13.

The action was in response to the mounting backlog of approved projects waiting for building permits and an attempt to set a policy which guarantees primary access of Carmel's water supply for current vacant lots of record.

Using an analogy of handing out treats, Staff Planner Brian Roseth told the council that "it's important when you have a limited resource to divy up the cookies so everyone gets just one."

The California Coastal Commission stopped issuing permits to Carmel until it settled on a water connection policy for the city's vacant lots of record. In addition, the Coastal Commission will only issue a permit if the project can receive a building permit from the city.

The council also directed staff to develop a permanent ordinance which would include allowing the backlogged approved projects be completed.

That ordinance could be heard in May, according to Planning Director Diane White.

Many large projects have been on hold since the council approved an urgency ordinance last year, which allowed the processing of such applications but stopped short of releasing final building permits.

Representatives of many of the projects on hold addressed the council, requesting that they be allowed to proceed.

While applications for construction on vacant lots of record can be accepted and acted upon, White said, those projects cannot complete the permit process until the permanent ordinance changes the present moratorium rules.

An urgency ordinance was first approved last year after the city was informed that water consumption had exceeded its 1,030.8 acre feet annual allocation from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. (One acre foot equals 325,851 gallons.)

The ordinance suspended final permits for any construction or business venture that increased water consumption in Carmel.

Once the city is at or exceeds 100 percent of its allocation, the water management district can suspend issuing water connection permits.

According to the urgency ordinance, building permits would be issued either when Carmel's water consumption dropped to 98 percent of the allocation or the water management district dropped the allocation or alloted the city more water.

In the seven months since the first approval, Carmel's water use has dropped about 13.2 acre feet. (The total allocation is 1,030.8 acre feet per water year.)

A portion of that reserve will be used for those projects currently on hold. Staff Planner Brian Roseth estimated the backlogged projects will use 3.2 acre feet a year.

Mayor Pro Tem Elinor Laiolo suggested that the Water Committee — Ed Lee and Alan Williams — help with drafting some of the policies for the ordinance.

Councilman James Wright questioned City Atty. Don Freeman about the legality of Alan Williams' involvement in drafting the ordinance. Williams represented owners of R-4 district property at the meeting. Freeman stated that it would be a conflict of interest for Williams to participate in the enterprise.

•

ON FRIDAY, the council's decisions differed from the staff prepared resolution and recommendations for a permanent ordinance.

The staff's prepared resolution included immediately returning all applications that have not had at least one approval from the planning commission.

The council, instead, allowed all applications on file by March 13 to continue processing whether or not it had been before the planning commission.

One of the applications that will be processed is the proposed senior citizens housing complex on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue, plans of which were filed with the planning department the day before.

The council also asked that permanent ordinance reduce the urgency ordinance's five-year water reserve goal from 10 to 5 percent.

One of the options presented by the staff was for abandoning the 10 percent reserve goal altogether. In July, the new water year would start and the city would have to be four percent below 100 percent of its allocation before building permits could be issued.

The reserve is to cushion Carmel from exceeding its allocation during years when water consumption increases.

Councilman Bob Fischer objected to that policy.

"I hate to do away with a reserve goal. What if we look at 5 percent a year?" Fischer asked.

Councilman James Wright agreed with Fischer.

"I'm concerned about the policy directing us to have no reserve at all," Wright said, and added he could "go along" with Fischer's suggestion of 5 precent.

The current five-year 10 percent goal requires the city to drop water consumption by 2 percent a year.

If the city approves a five-year 5 percent reserve instead, it will have to drop consumption by one percent a year. At the start of the new water year, consumption would have to be 2 percent below the allocation before projects that increase water use could proceed.

In the seven months since first approving the urgency ordinance, the city has reduced water consumption by 1.3 percent of the allocation.

Only three members — Laiolo, Wright and Fischer — cast the unanimous vote on the policy issues and moratorium.

Mayor Clint Eastwood and Councilman Bob Evans both stepped down because of conflicts of interest.

Eastwood is waiting on a building permit for his two story office/retail complex on San Carlos Street and Evans is part-owner of the Studio Theater which is up for lease.

Eastwood's project is listed as one with zero increase in water use because it replaces a nursery and the Hog's Breath Inn will be retrofitted to reduce use.

Other commercial projects waiting permits listed by the staff report are:

• The Little family's Sands Motel/Simpson's restaurant remodel and addition of insurance offices on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue. The project is projected to save water through new plumbing.

Matt Little described his project as one that "started in the Carter administration and probably won't be completed until Reagan is back in Hollywood."

Councilman James Wright questioned Little about why his project had not proceeded when it received approval in 1985, and therefore became caught in the moratorium.

Little said that the former council, which approved the remodel, had informed him that his project would not be approved with the addition of offices for his insurance company, now located above Nielsen's Market.

After the election, Little asked that approved application be amended to include the offices. The current council approved that request just prior to the moratorium.

• Robert D'Isidoro's two-story three-building office/apartment complex on Fourth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets (the former Grunion Run Restaurant site.)

D'Isidoro, a Carmel attorney, said he had been told by the city and the water management district that there was a water supply available for his project, and that was the reason he went ahead with it.

Now that the city has gone ahead with its moratorium, it has "sanctioned' the water district's allocation system.

"At this time I urge you to move forward to releasing the city from the moratorium," he said.

• Joseph McEldowney's condominiums on Junipero Avenue, which are projected to increase water consumption by 0.23 acre feet.

• The Freschi family condominiums on Junipero Avenue, projected to increase water consumption by 0.90 acre feet.

• Earl Walls condominiums of Junipero Avenue, which are estimated to take 1.34 acre feet.

• Goold Trust apartments on the corner of Sixth Avenue and San Carlos Street, a zero increase in water due to new plumbing.

Construction on the Goold building has begun, but there will be no water connection until the moratorium is lifted.

• Julian Bills' offices on Lincoln Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues. Projected water use is 0.24 acre feet.

• A shop division, an increase of 0.12 acre feet, by Jack Hakim of the Carmel Vintage Shoppe on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

• A residential care facility at the current location of the Surf Tides Inn, corner of Fifth Avenue and Mission Street. The project would reduce water consumption by 0.95 acre feet.

• Ted Leidig's six second-story apartments on the corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

There are also residential projects on hold until the moratorium is lifted.

Williams, who has represented the city at water board meetings, addressed the council and said that the allocation as done in 1981 was inadequate and based on faulty numbers.

He also asked that projects like the R-4, a large property for development on Junipero Avenue, be taken into consideration.

"There are property owners in the R-4 on hold while others who had gone through the process," he said, stating that the R-4 has been in the city works for seven years.

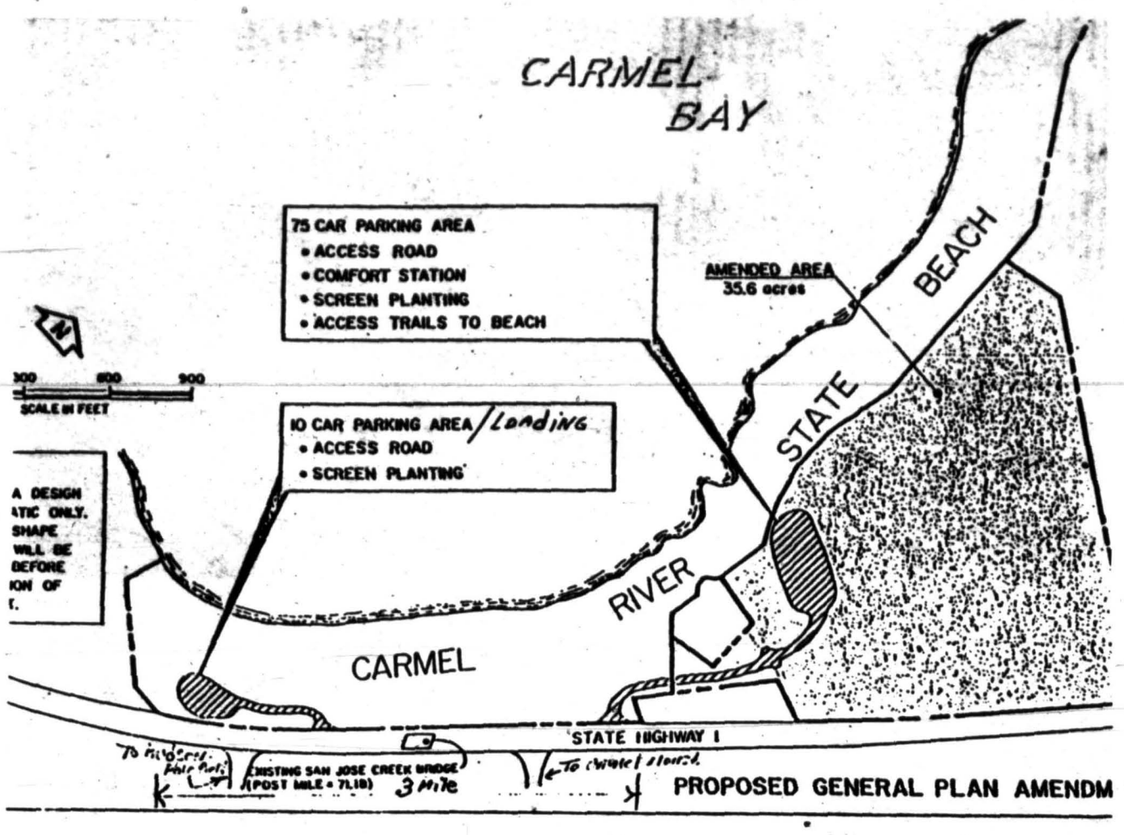
Couple dispute location of proposed beach parking lot



THE STATE Department of Parks and Recreation has met with neighbor opposition in its plans for a 75- to 100-car parking lot scheduled for 36-acre Briggs property. Some residents fear that once the meadow houses a parking lot the state will attempt construct camping facilities.

By DAVID LELAND

MARY LOU and Tommy Tomblin have a manila envelope bulging with correspondence to and from county and state officials concerning a proposed parking lot below their house in Carmel Meadows. They say they have no qualms with the general idea, but question whether the state may be a little off base in its planning.

At hand is a 75- to 100-car parking lot proposed for the 36-acre, state-owned Briggs property adjacent to Monastery Beach on the north side.

Under the Carmel Area Land Use Plan, parking along the side of the Highway 1 at Monastery Beach is slated to be abolished with the creation of off-street parking. The plan calls the Briggs property an ideal place for the parking lot.

Tommy Tomblin says the sloping meadow, which runs from the Carmel Meadow subdivision down to Monastery Beach, has looked the same for 200 years. So why change it?

He says the state Department of Parks and Recreation, which will lead the project, should build the lot on the south side of a grove of eucalyptus trees which separates the beach from the meadow.

But Mary Gunter, park district supervisor, said the land use plan is very clear in mandating the Briggs property as the best place for a parking facility with restrooms.

"The county has already stated it would not approve parking on the location in the general plan," she said. Originally the general plan specified the area the Tomblins desire as the best spot for the lot, she said. But that was before the state bought the Briggs property in 1978.

Gunter said the land is currently "being incorporated" into the general plan.

But the Tomblins feel this explanation does not take into consideration that Caltrans has rejected the idea of an entrance to the parking area off of Highway 1 onto the Briggs property.

Instead, Tomblin said, an access road will run from the south side of the eucalyptus grove (where he says the lot should be) around to the meadow parking lot.

"If they put an entrance road and access road they destroy the area," he said. "Why wreck the meadow?"

The county and state maintain the reason they will not build the lot on the south side of the trees is because of the wetland area, which would be damaged.

•

BUT THE Tomblins say this argument holds little water with them because the meadow below their house abounds with wildlife.

"They (the state and county) talk about seeing raccoon tracks on the other side," said Mary Lou. "We see raccoons, bobcats and blue herons."

What the Tomblins fear is that, once the state gets its parking lot, it will want to expand the area to include overnight camping facilities.

"The only reason to put it in the meadow is for expansion," Tommy said.

Mary Lou said they have broached that subject with members of the parks department at meetings and are told: "I can't say" whether that is a possibility or not.

But Gunter said there is absolutely no expansion planned for the property once the parking lot is built.

The next step for the $1 million project, which will include an additional 10-car lot at the south end of Monastery Beach for unloading and loading of scuba-diving equipment, is public review.

As part of the Point Lobos State Reserve and Carmel Beach General Plan, the amendment is open for public inspection at the public library in Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pacific Grove, Monterey and the state Department of Parks and Recreation.

On June 12, a park and rec commission will take final action on the amendment. The exact location and time of the meeting will be advertised in local newspapers.

Disabled athlete offers message of inspiration

By DAVID LELAND

SEVERAL HUNDRED Carmel High School students received a course in miracles Tuesday afternoon as double amputee Bob Wieland guided the students through an hour of experience, strength and hope.

Wieland, 41, who had both legs blown off after stepping on an 82 mm explosive in Vietnam June 14, 1969, let the students know immediately that he was not to be pitied.

"It's really cool to be at Carmel High School this afternoon," said Wieland, who was diagnosed as being dead on arrival after stepping on the land mine. "I'm only alive by the grace of God."

In fact, Wieland seems to forget that most people have two healthy legs to stand on. It took a neighbor to let him in on the secret.

"I didn't realize I was handicapped until my neighbor mentioned it," said Wieland, remembering the time he was mowing the lawn in his wheelchair. "(He said) you shouldn't be cutting the lawn because you're handicapped."

This attitude is coming from the mouth of a former athlete who seemed destined for a professional baseball career before being drafted into the military. The Minnesota Twins, New York Mets and the Philadelphia Phillies all wanted to sign him, he said.

But Wieland appears undaunted by his fate, and told the students that all they need to do with their lives is to set goals and objectives and they can accomplish anything they desire.

"The harder it is you work, the harder it is to surrender," said Wieland, who worked his way back from weighing 87 pounds after being in the military hospital to his current weight of 225 pounds of solid muscle.

To sway any non-believers in the audience, Wieland strapped himself to a weight-lifting bench and pressed a barbell with 250 pounds of weights attached above his head. Each time he pushed the barbell to an arm's length, the students shouted the number of that repetition until Wieland reached six.

"He was inspirational," said senior Janine Keefhauer, after the assembly. "I might have more courage to do things now that I wouldn't have done before."

•

WHILE WIELAND is a born-again Christian, his message to young people does not come across as one of a evangelical zealot. Quite the contrary, he presents more of a polished life story with a sprinkling of his love of God thrown in.

"I give all the glory in my life to Jesus Christ," said Wieland after lifting the weights. "He is my personal savior."

But the majority of Wieland's talk resembled a high school pep rally, featuring Wieland as the head cheerleader.

Dressed in blue nylon sweat pants and T-shirt, which could barely contain his bulging triceps, Wieland began his talk by setting the mood for students: "If you want to scream, shout and yell, do it!"

Indeed the students joined in as Wieland took them through their paces as he cajoled them in a voice that ranged from barely a whisper to the loud, staccato timber of a machine gun.

"In the long run a man or woman's dedication is the true measure of their integrity," he said. "Give it everything you have."

Wieland provided ample examples of how he gives each hurdle in his life everything he has.

Perhaps the most courageous effort for Wieland was his almost four-year walk across the United States to raise funds for both spiritual and physical hunger.

"I thought it would be kind of a challenge," said a smiling Wieland, who got the idea for the effort after watching a one-legged man with cancer walk across Canada.

So, on Sept. 8, 1982 he began his 2,784.1-mile journey from Knotts Berry Farm in Los Angeles, which ended in Washington, D.C. on May 14, 1986.

"The first step was the most difficult," said Wieland, tying his task into the student's lives. "But once it was taken it turned out to be the easiest."

Temperatures on the journey rose to 120 degrees and fell to 20 degrees below zero, Wieland said. Each day began by driving his car about five miles toward his destination and wheeling himself back to the point he left off. At the end of the day he would drive back and retrieve his wheelchair.

All totalled, Wieland said the trip amounted to 4,900,016 steps taken on the palms of his hands.

"If you really believe in what you are doing you have to take some kind of action," said Wieland, who was met at the end of his trip by President Ronald Reagan.

Wieland's latest accomplishment came last fall when he came in 19,413th place — dead last — in the 26-mile New York Marathon, wearing "size 1 Adidas" to cushion his hands from the hard pavement. It took him 98 hours and 47 minutes to complete the course, but he never quit.

"It's amazing," said freshman Jimmy Witherell. "I would have probably given up."

After the assembly it became apparent that Wieland was not acting before the students as he presented his Strive For Success program. He was still as animated offstage as he had been moments before.

"The students like me because I give it everything I have," he said.

And, no, he really never did get depressed or down after losing his legs in Vietnam. He had become a Christian shortly before entering the service and that faith has carried him on his journey ever since.

Youth center gets a new if familiar supervisor

By DAVID LELAND

THE NEW on-site supervisor at the Carmel Youth Center may have taken a round-about path on route to his position, but on further examination everything seems to have worked out just the way it was meant to be.

For David Rich, working at the youth center is a natural progression which began 34 years ago in San Francisco and ended one day last August when he and his wife Debbie stopped at the center for a peek at a rummage sale.

"My concern was to see what was happening with the kids," explained Rich, as he remembered that day. "(And) I walked out with a job."

Rich began his tenure as the youth center cook and manned the grill each afternoon cooking hamburgers for the students after school.

But Tuesday he was sworn in as on-site supervisor, replacing Jeff Bell. In his new job Rich will work closely with Recreation Director Beth Kastrup in carrying out programs and administrative duties.

"We're pleased to have him as a member of our team," said Kastrup, who said Rich beat out 26 candidates for the 35-hour-a-week job. "He has a great rapport with kids."

For Rich, the new job is an opportunity to use his skills in working with children he has developed during his eclectic life experiences.

"I think it's going to be a challenge to promote it (youth center) to where it can happen," Rich said. "It's going to keep me on my toes."

•

AFTER GRADUATING from Half Moon Bay High School in 1971, Rich joined the U.S. Coast Guard, which began his administrative life.

He was in charge of handling all overseas travel involving the Coast Guard for the West Coast. That meant anyone going abroad had his travel arrangements completed by Rich.

After an honorable discharge, Rich went on to College of the Redwoods in Eureka and received an associate arts degree in forestry.

But is was while working for a logging company that Rich said he received the calling of God.

"My life went through a little bit of a change," he said, while smiling. "I became a Christian."

He then moved to Santa Cruz where he enrolled in Bethany Bible College and studied music.

"I couldn't come to grips with the fact that I would be studying theology," he said. That was 1979.

After leaving Bethany, Rich joined Youth With a Mission, based in Tacoma, Wash., and spent four months in Monterrey, Mexico talking to students.

He then spent two years at Rhema Bible Training Center in Tulsa, Okla. before venturing to Hawaii.

While in the islands, Rich worked as a youth pastor, trained people to use Nautilus equipment in a fitness center and surfed the big waves.

In 1984 he went back to Tulsa and received a bachelor of arts degree from Oral Roberts University before moving to Carmel.

Rich said he looks forward to applying his various experiences with youngsters he has gathered throughout the years.

"I think a lot of the youth are crying out for another answer than drugs and alcohol," he said.

And, while he does have his feet firmly planted in the Christian faith, Rich said students at the youth center don't have to worry about listening to him expound on that subject.

"If they bring it (God) up, I'll talk," he said. "But I'm hired to do a job not to preach."

DAVE RICH, the new on-site supervisor at the Carmel Youth Center, brings to the job a varied background. While shown here posing in front of the center's grill, which he has operated for the past several months, Rich has moved on to his own office and is seeking one or two students to fill the position of cook. Clarification

IT HAS been pointed out that there are inaccuracies in information on Meals on Wheels in a March 12 Carmel Pine Cone article on the elderly.

However, a check with Sally Griffin, executive director, revealed that the information in the article "Network of help available to peninsula's seniors" is essentially correct.

Griffin said the figure for 300 volunteers was correct, that there was actually a total of 356 volunteers during the 1986 calendar year. There are 22 daily routes to deliver meals. Cost for the meals is $2.75, but on a "donation" basis. However, fewer than 20 percent get their meals free, Griffin said.

Some seniors do get their meals through Meals on Wheels at a center in Pacific Grove, but most — as the name itself implies — get their meals delivered at home.

Two for one

MOST PEOPLE would consider the Monterey Peninsula a two-for-one proposition, beautiful surroundings and mild temperatures year-round. Others might argue that the two-for-one deal was lopsided in the direction of the scenery because the summer fog was a questionable bonus.

Be that as it may, the recent arrival of a two-for-one commercial establishment, part ice cream parlor and part video store, caused us to reflect on this tendency to combine two good things. Hopefully the result is always greater than the sum of the parts.

Our world of stocks and bonds has been bitten by the combination bug and the result is the convertible security, a bond or preferred stock thay pays a fixed rate of interest or dividend and can be exchanged for a predetermined number of shares of common stock. Convertibles are unique securities because they combine the elements of a fixed-income security and an equity. Like a fixed-income security, convertibles offer a higher yield than the related common stock. Like an equity, they offer the potential for capital appreciation.

Because convertible securities are flexible, they can weather many market environments. In a declining market, the security still pays its dividend, providing a cushion that common stocks lack. In a rising stock market, the price increase of the underlying stock usually increases the value of the covertible, a feature fixed-income securities lack. As a result, convertible securities can provide a high level of total return over a market cycle.

While convertible securities are an attractive investment, it can be a difficult market for the individual investor. A convertible securities mutual fund, however, is managed by experienced portfolio managers. Also, a fund offers diversification. This diversification reduces risk because no one security can then seriously affect the overall performance of the portfolio. It would be very difficult for an individual investor to achieve the same degree of diversity.

Over the 10-year time span of 1974-1984, convertible securities, represented by the average performance of existing convertible securities funds as measured by Lipper Analytical Services, have surpassed the total rate of return (income plus appreciation) of the S&P 500, a broad-based common-stock index, and the Shearson Lehman Bond Index, which tracks long-term government-guaranteed bonds and investment-quality corporate bonds. Keep in mind, however, that past performance is no guarantee of future results.

Now that's having your ice cream and your video too! Or any other combination you might think of.

Good turnout for first general plan hearings

A GOOD turnout at Saturday's General Plan public hearing elicted praise from all parties involved. The city estimated that 140 people or more attended the five-and-a-half hour session.

More meetings may be scheduled to review the entire plan. The next meeting is scheduled for 3 p.m., Wednesday, April 1 in Carmel City Council Chambers. (Holly McFarland photo.)

(Editor's Note: The Carmel Pine Cone will review the public meeting comments on the Land Use Element next week in greater depth as completion of that section was scheduled for March 18 — after press time.)

By NANCY HILLS

PUBLICITY, PHONE calls and citizen interest brought at least 140 people to the first meeting on proposed changes in Carmel's General Plan.

Though the Saturday, March 14 meeting was scheduled for a review of four elements, the Carmel Planning Commission and General Plan Review Committee were able to only consider most of the revisions in the Land Use portion of the plan.

"Good," was how Mayor Clint Eastwood said he felt about the five-and-a-half-hour session.

"Once everyone realized we are all trying to aim for the same common good it fell into a constructive discussion," he said.

With public input, Eastwood added, 'we're on the right track."

References were made at the beginning of the meeting of growing division within the city.

"I hear disturbing things" about the city being divided into the "faction outside of power and the faction in power," attorney Francis "Skip" Lloyd said after praising the committee for its hard work.

"I certainly agree this is an opportunity for a healing process," Committee Chairman Bob Evans replied.

Carmel Planning Commissioner and General Plan Review Committee member Olof Dahlstrand led the discussion of the goals, objectives and policies of Land Use Element changes and outlined the majors revisions.

Dahlstrand listed elimination of special policies for Ocean Avenue and the deletion of limiting certain types of businesses as two of the major differences between the existing land use element and the revised one.

"We also had some deep problems with encouraging resident-oriented businesses," Dahlstrand said, "and we deplore the fact so many have left the city but mechanisms to keep them here are very difficult."

Dahlstrand said that the committee also questioned the whether the 1982 questionnaire "demonstrated an overwhelming public sentiment. We felt the sampling did not go far enough."

That questionnaire was used extensively in writing the existing general plan.

Later in the meeting Howard Nieman, a Carmel resident, suggested if they don't like the 1982 questionnaire they should do one they do like.

A show of hands by the audience indicated many were in favor of the idea.

In a discussion about the softening or loosening of restrictions in the general plan, Marjorie Adams commented "we need toughening. I would retain the word 'limit', tighten it" in reference to changing the words "Limit commercial district" to "Encourage the limitation of..." Her comment drew applause.

Matt Little, owner of Carmel Insurance Agency and part-owner of The Sands Motel, said he did not like the word "limit."

"I think the word 'encourage' allows flexibility," Little said.

By not allowing that flexibility, he added, the plan could be in conflict with the objective that states promotion of economic well-being is an important goal of the plan.

Major topics of the discussion during the meeting included:

- The deletion of Ocean Avenue policies.
- Deletion of policies to limit the type and number of certain businesses.
- Deletion of sun rights.
- Changes in wording, such as from "prohibit" to "discourage."
- Removal of residential design review from the plan.

Middle school looking for artist to paint murals

CARMEL MIDDLE School is looking for an artist to work with middle school students on a project to beautify the "quad" area of the school.

The "quad" area is an area of white stucco walls that are divided into panels that are suitable for painting with stucco paint.

The project is funded by FOCUS, a non-profit organization supporting the Carmel schools and the stipend is $3,800. Please submit drawings or photographs of your ideas to Karl Pallastrini at Carmel Middle School by March 31, 1987. All entries will be reviewed by the middle school staff and Parent Faculty Club.

Speed racers

THEY CAME ready to race with their Grasshoppers, Hornets, RC-10s, Turbo Optimas, Supershots and Boomerangs — all two and four-wheel drive radio-controlled racers — to Forest Hill Park in Carmel for the monthly races supported by the city of Carmel and organizer Chuck August. An unofficial group of 35 has burgeoned to more than 120 racers now. Top photo, Mike Lemaster readies the cars on the starting line, while (above, left to right) Ty Brooks, Paul Mattox, Cory Lauterbach, Stephen Covell, Mike Perry, Chris Morgan, Steve Rutherford and Leslie Lipscomb compete in a 13-an-under heat. Lipscomb, first-place winner in his class, prepares his machine (left), while August (right) displays his 60 mph asphalt-only screamer. (Holly McFarland photos.)

MANY IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED FOR THE OUT-DOOR THEATER

A force of mechanics will soon be busy at the Forest Theater. It was decided to tear up the buckled and much worn tongue-and-groove stage floor and replace it with ordinary surfaced pine boards that will shed the winter's water. It is also probable that stairways direct from the dressing rooms to the stage will be built. W.T. Kibbler, C.S. Greene and L. Gottfried have the matter in hand.

Another matter which will have to receive the serious attention of the theater management is reforestization. Slowly, relentlessy, inevitable, year by year, the back-stage pines are disappearing. In the years gone by these large trees have served as a natural sounding board, and many have noted that with the passing of the trees it becomes more and more difficult to hear out front. It is a question of beauty as well as utility that the planting of trees be taken up at once. When the trees are gone, it will be too late.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT...

Fraulein Grete Stumpf, who is traveling in this country and plans to remain for about a year, visited in Carmel during the past week. To those who have met her, she has managed to convey a slightly different impression than the popular one about what is going on in Germany.

Fraulein Stumpf is a German Quaker, and believes in peace. She believes, as have many non-Germans, that the German people have a world mission of spiritual leadership. She declares that the intellectual and spiritual life in Germany, which has been sincerely admired by other peoples, is still going on in Germany.

The German youth of today, she said, are an extraordinary serious and high minded lot. They are immensely concerned with the necessity of developing their full potentialities as individuals, and with the welfare of their country.

DEL MONTE DEDICATES ADDDITIONAL LAND TO EXISTING GREENBELT

Richard Osborne, president of Del Monte Properties Company, announced today that 102 acres comprising the Del Monte Golf Course has been dedicated against any building, thus preserving the area for all time as a green belt.

This legal declaration is in addition to the several hundred acres of waterfront along the 17-Mile Drive, including the Pebble Beach Golf Links and the two courses at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, which the company dedicated several years ago.

The easement declaration and agreement was signed and recorded this week at the County Recorder's office of Monterey County.

SHOULD METERMAIDS REST ON SUNDAY?

Sunday parking, along with a number of other traffic subjects, will be discussed at a special city council meeting with the planning commission and the traffic safety committee, to be held in Sunset Center on Monday, March 21 at 8 p.m.

Although stop signs, speed limit changes, truck route changes and new 20-minute parking zones will be brought up at the meeting, probably the item commanding the most interest will be Sunday parking.

STATE AND FEDERAL BUDGET CUTBACKS AFFECT CARMEL HANDICAPPED CLASSES

Two hundred handicapped students in special education programs in the Carmel Unified School District have become pawns in the great budget retreat of 1982.

Both the state and federal government have withdrawn funds for special education programs for handicapped students which those governments mandated several years ago.

And the Carmel school district — faced with its own financial problems caused by enrollment declines and reduced revenues — must fill the budget gap to continue programs for the handicapped.

Status of special education funding is just one unknown factor the district faces in its 1982-83 budget.

Investment seminar scheduled

A free seminar on "Investing Tax-free for 1987" will be presented at 4:45 p.m. Wednesday, March 25 at the Monterey main branch of Bank of America, 200 E. Franklin St.

The seminar will feature account executive Marie Sweeney of Bank of America's Capital Markets Group. She will outline tax reform and the benefits of revenue and municipal bonds.

Account officer Cynthia Ghaffari, also of Capital Markets Group, will review the advantages of premium-priced bonds. Economist and vice president Steve Wood will speak on the economic and interest rate outlook for 1987. For reservations, call Faye Ferranti at 646-5748.

The write stuff

By SHARRON DOUGLAS
Principal
Carmel River School

CREATIVE WRITING is one of the skills stressed with our students at River School. Children begin dictating stories in kindergarten. In first-grade, students are given many opportunities for written self-expression. As each child progresses through the grades, he/she gains skill in expressing ideas, developing story lines, utilizing expressive language, while writing in a variety of formats.

The children's creativity is shared in a variety of ways: reading orally to other students, creating books, filming original plays, publishing newspapers, letter writing, composing autobiographies, etc.

The following are some poetry samples selected from Mrs. Kathy Eyerman's fifth-grade class:

Roses
Beautiful colors,
Petals glowing in the sun
Dew drops dripping

Lobsters
Lobster's snapping claws,
Ready to clutch

If news about TAX REFORM has you confused about the value of Individual Retirement Accounts...consider this. YOUR IRA CONTRIBUTION FOR 1986 IS STILL FULLY DEDUCTIBLE! And, while it may not be in the future, your funds will continue to grow with compounded interest—tax deferred—until you retire or reach age 70½.

That's the real magic of the IRA. And even though your last chance at a guaranteed tax deduction is a good reason to open an IRA now, the best reason to contribute to your Individual Retirement Account is that through the magic of compounding, your deposits will grow rapidly over the years, providing you with a nest egg you can really bank on.

You'll see how important opening an IRA today can be to you in the future.

Twenty-sixth Symphonie d'Elegance

THE MONTEREY County Symphony Guild now has its 26th Annual Symphonie d'Elegance under its fashion belt, so to speak. The ladies and a sprinkling of gentlemen were counted in at 400 in the Grand Ballroom at the Hyatt Regency Monterey, for the biggest fund-raiser of the year.

This spring there were 57 benefactors, sponsors and patrons, and baskets of raffle tickets sold for donated prizes. These, plus the sell-out luncheon to guests from Big Sur, to Palo Alto, to overseas, quickly add up to good support for the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra.

Saks Fifth Avenue of Carmel decked the Guild-member models in 79 outfits for the runway and all 21 models performed like pros under the direction of Yvonne McBride, Saks manager, who also did the commentary. Clothes were livelier this spring with reds strong, silks, satins, mums, bubbles, reptiles, ivory, wood and an $85,000 sable full-length coat. Fashionable music was courtesy of Richard LaSalle and group. Assisting behind the scenes from Saks were Paula Mallett, assistant manager, Irene Sampson, salon manager, and Renee Rolfs, an experienced model herself.

Following the fashion parade, Mrs. John A. Andrews, Jr. (Guild president) announced the prize winners as Maestro Clark E. Suttle drew tickets. There were many crossed fingers and hopeful hearts for such prizes as a pin/pendant from LaPorte's which was won by Titina Bumichas from Athens, Greece (whose son attends the Naval Postgraduate School).

Several gentlemen were hoping to win the UA air tickets to D.C. for a stay at the Hyatt there, but Mrs. Earl Hudson held the winning number. Bea Tagg won a set of Riley golf irons and woods; Mrs. Carl Stanley will be viewing the Margaret Eifler painting, and Sarah Samuelson will take her loose change in a Louis Vuitton bag from Saks. Frank Thatcher will spend a weekend at San Francisco's Donatello. Other prizes were won by residents of Salinas and the basket of pink tulips placed in the center of our table by Mrs. Graeme Mackenzie (decoration chairwoman and model) was won by a lady from Redwood City.

Mrs. Howard F. Healey was event chairwoman with help from Mrs. George Montgomery (hostess chairwoman), Mrs. Lloyd E. Test (mailing), Mrs. James Borovilos (prizes chairwoman and a model), and Mrs. Robert McFarren (reservations chairwoman). Mr. McFarren gallantly assisted models at the runway stairs. Table wines were donated by The Monterey Vineyard.

JESTERS GREAT GAMBOL

Whether or not gambling is in the blood, it certainly was in the air Saturday night at the Reno/Tahoe Casino (sometimes known as Rancho Canada) when the Jesters held their Great Gambol of '87. With tables and chips arriving an hour late, everyone had time to chat and get oiled up and ready to go as soon as the chips fell into place. The blackjack, crap, and roulette tables and antique slot machines (which clicked to tokens only) were busy the whole evening.

The bountiful buffet served in the dining room drew people in early so they could settle down to some serious winning. Mary Teel Johnson tickled the casino ivories with "oldies but goodies."

Playing to the gambling instincts, some prizes were lodgings in Reno and Lake Tahoe (the real ones). Everything was available in the prize list of 96 items: from framing to fudge to film developing, to doctor exams, bagels to condos, beauty care, dinners, you name it.

The three with the most casino chips were J.S. "Lucky" McClure, Loretta DeRolf and Marian Leidig. Lottery winners were Phoebe Croonquist and Keith Davison. Most of all everyone had fun while raking in a little cash for the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Gambol chairmen for the big night were Bud "Chance" Williams, "Black" Jack Cunningham, and "Slick" Del Johnson. Helping the gaming experts were Irene Crispo, Polly Kennaston, Ginny Morrall (who did decorations), and Head jester Peggy Compton, in sophisticated "blackjack" black, was here, there and everywhere.

FIRST LES TOQUES BLANCHES DINNER

The organization, Les Toques Blanches International (in 17 countries), was brought to the United States from France only two years ago and introduced to California 18 months ago in Los Angeles.

"We started in Los Angeles with 13 members and now we have 142," says the California president of LTB, Steve Geving, executive chef for First Interstate Bank.

HOSTESS CHAIRWOMAN Mrs. George Montgomery (right) and Caddy Thompson (center) stopped selling raffle tickets long enough to chat with Mrs. Howard F. Healey, Symphony Guild luncheon chairwoman.

MRS. ROBERT McFarren (left), chaired the luncheon reservation committee for the Symphony Guild, along with Mrs. Turner Croonquist. Mrs. Lloyd Test (standing) chaired the mailing crew.

SUSAN KNAUF models a late-night black and white two-piece dress in the Symphony Guild fashion show.

STATELY ELIZABETH Pasquinelli models a short flaring plaid dress for other Symphony Guild members.

WHO BETTER than Irene MacKenzie for the grand finale of the Symphony Guild fashion show? She was the perfect model to display this gown in spring black and white.

Monterey Chapter president Bert Cutino (co-owner of the Sardine Factory) formed the local group, which has 23 members plus eight affiliate and associate members.

The first annual dinner for the Monterey Chapter LTB was held Sunday evening in the Monterey Grand Ballroom, Hyatt Regency Monterey. For the reception there was a large ice sculpture of the Les Toques emblem, a variety of domestic caviar, vodka, and Monterey Vineyard Brut Champagne 1984.

A special presentation of the new ribbon and medal to the members, the affiliates and associate members was made by Bert Cutino and Steve Geving. A photo of the entire group will be sent to headquarters in France.

Bert and Steve both stressed the principles of LTB, which are a dedication to chivalry and camaraderie among professional chefs. "Our most prized virtue is pursuit of the best — nothing else will do," said Bert.

The white-gloved service was appropriate for the exceptional menu prepared by executive chef Chris Sprecher and his staff at the Hyatt. The menu of Smoked Breast of Pheasant with Blackberry Sauce, Consomme Royale, Salmon with Sole Mousse in Saffron Sauce, was eased down with chardonnay from Flora Springs. Tropical Sorbets on Papaya Coulis cleansed the palate for the Wild Boar and Venison with Apply Brandy Sauce and Pine Needle Juniper Sauce, Grilled Polenta, Glazed Chestnuts and Vegetables, along with the highlight of the feast — 1984 William Selyen Pinot Noir.

Warm Wild Mushroom Salad, Fried Goat Cheeses, Honey Mustard Seed Dressing preceeded Crepe Tulip with Glazed Black Cherries, Caramel Anglaise Sauce. To accompany this Master Sommelier Fred Dame had selected Gabriele y Caroline Late Harvest Riesling. Lastly, Assorted Friandise, brandy and cafe. This was truly a night to remember!

BEACON HOUSE HONORS PATRONS & ARTISTS

The sponsors, patrons, and artists of the Beacon House Art Auction were honored with a preview art party in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hubbard on Sunday afternoon.

Original works of art which were donated by artists of the peninsula were displayed. There were 58 watercolors, etchings, gauches, charcoals, constructions and sculpture, with still lifes, local landmarks, mission scenes, Carmel Valley scenes, seascapes, birds and animals. Not only will the auction offer the creme de la creme from the art world, but grand raffle prizes include three hours of design consultation time from designers Michelle Pheasant and Janis Gistinelli and a night in a San Francisco condo.

Wanna go? The auction/dinner begins at 5 p.m. at Rancho Canada, Saturday, March 21 for silent auction bidding, dinner at 7 with the live auction at 8. All for last year's price of $25 per head. To reserve call Betsy Brown at 373-4290.

Sports exchange program now accepting athletes

Sport For Understanding, a non-profit international exchange program, is still accepting applications for 60 of 75 amateur teams that will travel overseas this summer on sport and culture tours.

"The excitement about this program continues to grow," says Executive Director Richard S. Willard. "We proved the concept of sport, culture and family living to be not only viable, but unbelievably rewarding to both visiting and hosting athletes. In terms of applicants, we're running about 50 percent ahead of last year, and we expect to attract a lot more teenagers in the next couple of months."

Each team of 12-16 athletes is accompanied by a trained, volunteer coach and officially sanctioned to travel by the appropriate sport governing body. Participants must be 14-19 years of age and carry a GPA of 2.0. Including international transportation, fees for the 4-week programs range from $1,600 to $2,450 depending on destination.

NOSTALGIA NIGHT WITH KAYE BALLARD

For those of us who are old enough to remember the heyday of the fabulous nightclub era in America were given a nostalgic trip by Kaye Ballard in her one-woman show at the New Wharf Theatre.

In New York, we remember seeing Edith Piaf in a supper club, Bea Lilli onstage, Barbra Streisand in the old Blue Angel and Liza Minelli (much later of course) in the Waldorf Astoria. In Chicago: Sophie Tucker in the Palmer House and Judy Garland in concert onstage. And many others.

Ms. Ballard, who struggled for year before reaching Broadway and adorning the cover of Life magazine while playing in The Golden Apple. is a talented lady with great warmth, timing, comic and singing ability...Memories came back of seeing her in Cole Porter Revisited in the Village, in Minnie's Boys on Broadway, and as a young film star in a movie with Cliff Robertson.

Darren Cohen from Long Island, N.Y., at a mere 23, was an impressive pianist and musical director for Ms. Ballard.

THE LUNCH & LEARN SERIES

A Monthly Forum of Unique Financial and Business Perspectives.

County Bank and Trust is pleased to offer another presentation in the Lunch & Learn Series, an informative calendar of noontime forums focusing on our Monterey County economy and related points of interest.

Forum Topic: "Planting Seeds: An Entrepreneurial Guide for a Successful Business"

Interested in starting your own business? Or, maybe just getting the most out of the business you now operate? Then you won't want to miss this month's Lunch and Learn forum with guest speaker Rebecca Morgan of the Morgan Seminar Group. Ms. Morgan will address the basic issues an entrepreneur should be aware of before going into business. Plus, ways to strengthen an existing business will be covered. From the marketing side Ms. Morgan will provide tips to add to a marketing plan and show ways businesses can differentiate themselves from their competitors.

Call for Reservations

The Lunch & Learn Series is provided as a community-oriented service to enhance and stimulate the thinking and actions of the residents of Monterey County. To secure your reservation for the "Planting Seeds: An Entrepreneurial Guide for a Successful Business" forum and luncheon, call Pat Turner at 624-6032. A cost of $5 includes lunch.

Auto club driving tips

As the snow lures skiers and other winter sports enthusiasts to the Sierra Nevada, the California State Automobile Association (AAA) offers tips on driving safely on ice and snow.

The CSAA urges motorists to follow these winter driving suggestions:

- To ensure better traction, use approved snow tires or chains. (CSAA officials remind motorists that even though cable chains are now legal in California, they have been rated less efficient than conventional link chains in providing traction.)
- Before setting out on a trip, give your car a winter check-up, with special attention to the battery, defroster, windshield wipers, tires, exhaust system and coolant.
- Avoid over-acceleration, over-steering and over-braking, which can produce a skid on wet, icy or slick surfaces.
- To start the car in the snow, accelerate gently and gradually.
- Never let the air out of tires to obtain better traction.
- Acceleration is slower in high altitudes because your car loses efficiency. Signal your intentions to stop or turn much earlier than normal, because it takes more time to pass another vehicle.
- Remember that it takes more time to stop on snow or ice, so try to allow additional spacing between cars.
- On long, snowy drives, check periodically for an accumulation of ice or snow under the fenders, which can make steering difficult or even impossible.
- On long downgrades, don't ride your brakes. Use second or low gear to help slow the car.
- If braking is necessary, squeeze the brakes just to the point of locking, then release and repeat. (Pumping brakes, once recommended, is now considered unsafe, since it can cause wheels to lock, resulting in a skid or spin.)
- Beware of icy patches in hills, bridges and underpasses.
- Watch out for special speed regulations and warnings on road conditions.
- Remember to bring a snow shovel, ice scraper, snow brush, flashlight (with extra batteries), flares and jumper cables. Sand or cat box litter can give you extra traction if your car gets stuck. Also useful: a transistor radio, dried fruit, nuts or other non-perishable food and a warm blanket or sleeping bag for each traveler.

RETIRED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES TO MEET

The Monterey Chapter of NARFE, National Association of Retired Federal Employees, will conduct their March meeting at 12:45 p.m., Monday, March 23, at the New Monterey Neighborhood Center.

Dr. Boyd Huff, professor of Asian Security Affairs at the Naval Postgraduate School since 1958, will speak on "The Burdens of CINCPAC: New Responsibilities in the Pacific and the Indian Ocean."

Current and retired federal employees are invited to attend. Instead of the regular potluck, dessert and coffee will be served. A business meeting and the program will follow.

BIG BUDDIES TO BE HONORED

The Buddy Program of the Monterey Peninsula will host their first Big Buddy Appreciation Reception from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., Thursday, March 19, at the Monterey Sheraton Hotel. The board of directors and staff of the Buddy Program will honor the men and women Big Buddy volunteers.

Certificates, refreshments and door prizes will be included. For more information, contact Cindy Joerger, match coordinator, at 649-0276.

ANNUAL SPRING HORSE SHOW

The Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club will host their annual Spring Horse Show Sunday morning, March 22, at the Club Grounds on East Garzas Road in Carmel Valley.

English and Western divisions will be judged. The English division, featuring hunters, jumpers, flat classes and pony classes, will begin at 8:30 a.m. in Arena 1. Western division halter, trail, pleasure and equitation competition starts at 8 a.m. in Arena 2.

Admission is free. A snack and beverage booth will be open all day.

For more information, call Margaret Lindstrom at 624-1472.

CONCERNED SENIOR CITIZEN GROUP TO MEET

The Concerned Senior Citizens Monterey Peninsula Club will hold its monthly meeting at 1:30 p.m. Monday, March 23 in the community room of the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St.

The guest speaker will be Nancy Pluth, a registered nurse and patient care planner for the Visting Nurses Association and the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. She will speak on "High Blood Pressure: The Facts and the Treatment."

The meeting is open to the public. For more information contact Joe Monaghan at 375-4472.

ALTRUSA CLUB'S MONTHLY DINNER SET

Shary Farr will be the speaker for the Altrusa Club — Altrusa International monthly meeting at 6:45 p.m. Monday, March 23 at the Pine Inn in Carmel. She will speak on "A New Career for Women: Special Services in Banks."

The meeting will be chaired by Anita Church. Lee Atha Gore is club president. For more information contact Iona Logie at 624-8023.

JASON HARBERT TO BE HONORED

Jason Harbert, teacher and coach at Carmel High and Robert Louis Stevenson School for 35 years, will be honored in Reid Hall at RLS in Pebble Beach, on Saturday, April 4.

A reception and no-host bar starts at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7. Guest speakers will be featured.

Tickets, $15, are available only through March 15. Contact Peter Slovenski at 624-1257 for more information.

ELKS BENEFIT FOR HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

The Monterey Elks Lodge will host their annual fashion show starting with a no-host cocktail hour at 6 p.m. Saturday, March 21 at the Elks Lodge, 150 Mar Vista Drive in Monterey.

The public is invited. Dinner, dancing, prizes and presentation of this year's theme child, from Carmel Valley, are included. Proceeds will support the Elks' Major Project, which benefits handicapped children. The Elks have provided aid and treatment to more than 46,000 handicapped children during the past 36 years.

Tickets, $15 per person, may be purchased at the Elks Lodge or by calling 373-1285. Prepaid reservations are required due to limited seating capacity.

For more information call Sandi Stovall at 649-1313 or 375-5373.

28TH BEACON HOUSE ART AUCTION

The Beacon House, the oldest alcohol and drug rehabilitation home on the Monterey Peninsula, will host its annual art auction at 5 p.m. Saturday, March 21, at the Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley. Dinner and two auctions are scheduled, a silent auction before dinner and an art auction after dinner.

The silent auction is scheduled for 5 p.m., dinner at 7 and art auction at 8.

A large portion of Beacon House's budget is dependent upon the auction. This year a $25,000 goal has been set.

Tickets, in advance only, are $25 per person. For reservations and information, please call 373-4290 or 372-2334.

THE CARMEL Bach Festival recently received a $2,500 donation from the Carmel branch of Monterey Savings to sponsor the festival's annual "Tower Music" events for the upcoming 50th season. Negotiating With the Sellers, No.53

By Jayde Thompson

One of the first questions many prospective buyers ask when they find the perfect house is "Will they take less?" The agent can't tell you what the sellers will take, and the only way to test their bottom line is to make an offer. If you can negotiate a lower price or better terms than the original offering, you may save yourself some money, but you could risk losing a home you really love in the process.

If your offer is below the seller's bottom line, they will probably make you a counter offer. If your bid is very low, you run the risk of offending them. Your offer may not be taken seriously — especially if it is far below market value.

The other risk is that while you and the sellers are trading offers and counter offers, another buyer may come in with a more attractive bid. If this happens before your negotiations are concluded, your sellers may accept the competing offer. Before you decide what kind of offer to make, weigh the benefits and risks of going in with a price lower than what the sellers are asking. Do you love the house? Are similar homes available so you'll have a back-up? Is the asking price in line with the local market and are other buyers interested in the same property? Can you afford to pay the asking price?

If you're planning a move, call me, Jayde Thompson, your Carmel specialist at Real Estate By The Sea at 624-1444 or stop by my office at San Carlos and Seventh.

LUMBER CAME FROM AUSTRALIA

Lumber for the Gordon House, on Pierce St. along Monterey's Path of History, was milled in Australia, shipped to England and reshipped around the Horn to Monterey. Built in 1849-50, it was one of the first frame houses in Calfornia. Its owner did not trust adobe as a building material, but did follow the simple lines of existing houses made of the clay bricks.

A LASTING IMPRESSION

Robert Louis Stevenson arrived for a short visit in Monterey on Sept. 1, 1879. Although his stay was brief, the effect of the Peninsula on the writer was deep and lasting.

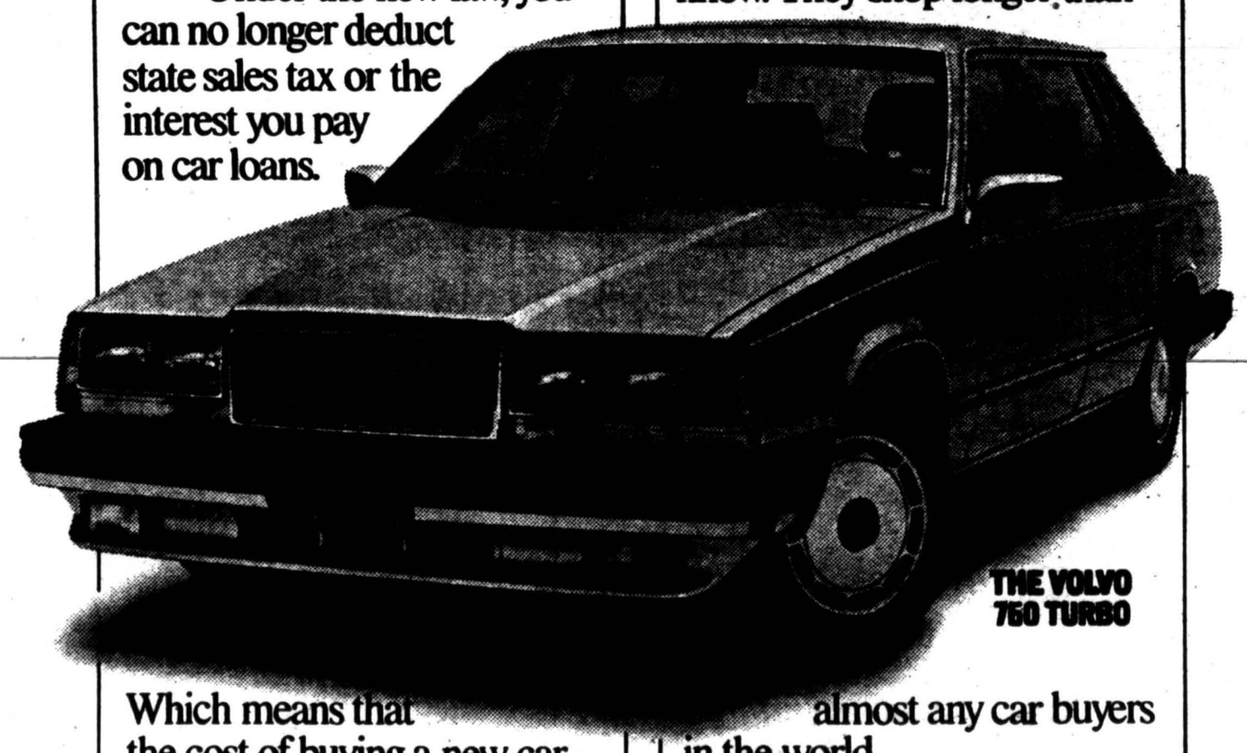
WILL THE NEW TAX LAW FORCE YOU TO BUY A BETTER CAR?

One thing's sure.

Buying a new car will be more expensive.

Under the new law, you can no longer deduct state sales tax or the interest you pay on car loans.



Which means that the cost of buying a new car could rise many hundreds of dollars. So now, more than ever, you need a car that's worth the money in the first place.

Which could lead you directly to a Volvo.

A car famous for durability, safety, and—above all—for giving people their money's worth. Volvo owners should know. They shop longer than almost any car buyers in the world.

If the new tax law makes you do that, you might just end up with one benefit you hadn't counted on.

A Volvo.

NURSE'S SCHOLARSHIP LUNCHEON & FASHION SHOW

Celebrating 25 years of awarding scholarships to aspiring nurses, the Woman's Civic club of Pacific Grove will hold the annual Nurse's Scholarship luncheon and fashion show on Wednesday, March 25, in the Pacific Grove Community Center on Junipero Street beginning at noon.

Don Marie Fashions, newly moved into the Doubletree, will present the latest in styles along with additional knits and clothing made by members of the only local Federated Women's club. Memories and nostalgia will round out the parade of fashions. Capping the 25th anniversary is the theme for the afternoon event.

Nadine Annand, originator of the annual scholarship in 1962, is chairman for the fundraising which will also feature door prizes and piano music by Nadine Hagaman. Ingeburg Putnam is co-chairwoman with Thyra Maitre and Lydia Grayson in charge of the luncheon. Martha Herring is ticket chairman with donations at $10 each. Polly Nickell is in charge of decorations with club members serving as hostesses for the luncheon.

Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Herring.

RLS WILL BE PUTTIN' ON THE RITZ

The Robert Louis Stevenson School annual auction, Puttin' on the Ritz, will be held March 21 in Reid Hall on the school campus. A silent auction will be held at 6 p.m., dinner at 7:30, and live auction at 8:30.

Chuck Huggins, from the Television Auction Shopping Program, will be the auctioneer.

Featured items include: Bali Hai Hotel in Tahiti, Mauna Lani Bay Hotel in Kona, Hawaii, condos in Hawaii and Santa Fe, New Mexico, artwork by Carol Chapman, Gail Factor, Salvador Dali, and an original print by Ansel Adams, a 1973 Triumph convertible, furs, jewelry and clothing modeled by students at Stevenson.

There will also be a drawing for a new red Toyota Tercel during the evening. Only 300 tickets are offered for this drawing.

The proceeds of this event enhance the academic and sports programs at Stevenson.

Co-Chairmen for the event are Sarah Slautterback and Pat Yates. Anyone who would like an invitation should contact Jane Balleisen at the school 624-1257.

BEVERLY MANOR RUMMAGE SALE

Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital will hold a Rummage Sale Saturday, March 21, 1987 from 12 to 3 p.m. at 23795 W.R. Holman Highway, Monterey. Used clothing, toys and furnishings will be offered. All proceeds to benefit the Arthritis Foundation.

OFFICERS WIVES SET ART AUCTION

The Officers Student Wives Club's annual Art Auction will be held at 6 p.m. Saturday, March 21, in the Barbara McNitt Ballroom of Herman Hall. This is the major OSWC fund raising activity of the year. Proceeds of almost $8,000 from last year's auction went to local charities and service organizations.

To conduct their auction this year the group has chosen Patrician Galleries of Atlanta, Ga. Patrician has been in business for more than 22 years. They do over 400 auctions a year throughout the country and will present a wide variety of custom framed art.

There will be over 250 items, both modern and traditional. The selection will include limited edition original graphics, oils, watercolors, etchings and fine art prints. The price range varies from as low as $35 dollars up to several thousand. Patrician offers you a 15 year exchange privilege and a no interest, extended payment plan on investment works of art.

There will be complementary wine from local wineries, hors d'oeuvres, a no-host bar and hourly door prizes which will include two major door prizes of $500 and $1,000 in value. The $500 door prize is the hand-signed artists proof edition of John Kelly's Tall Ships.

Preview the art at 6 p.m. and at 7:30 p.m. the auction begins. There is no obligation to buy. This event is open to the public. Anyone attending may enter through the Sloat Avenue gate. A stand-up auction will be held Sunday, March 22 in the ballroom from noon to 3 p.m. for all art not sold Saturday. Call Lucy Escue (649-4730) or Lisa Hutchins (372-7313) for more information.

QUILTERS TO VIEW SHOW ENTRIES

OBITUARIES

Howard W. Judson

Memorial services took place Feb. 28 at the Little Chapel by-the-sea, followed by scattering of ashes off Point Lobos, for Howard William Judson, who died Feb. 26 at his Carmel home. He was 65.

Born Oct. 8, 1921 in Flushing, N.Y., he received a master's degree in mechanical engineering from Columbia University. He was employed in various engineering, advertising and marketing positions with Shell Oil Co. in the U.S. and at Shell International in London for more than 35 years.

He lived in Houston, Texas, for many years before moving to Carmel five years ago. He was listed in Who's Who in the south and southwest for his work in consumer relations.

He was recently re-elected to the board of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, and was a former president of Carmel Views Community Association. He was also a member of numerous advertising and consumer related boards and organizations, including the National Advertising Review Board.

Survivors include his wife, Christina; two daughters, Carole Foxley of New York City and Jeanne Fredericks of Wilton, Conn.; a son, Ronald of Lafayette; a brother, Arnold of St. Louis, Mo.; a sister, Marian Rischoff of Springfield, Ill., and eight grandchildren.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the American Cancer Society, Visiting Nurses Association or the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Charles M. Gillette

A Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated Feb. 26 at Carmel Mission Basilica for Charles M. Gillette of Carmel, who died Feb. 24 at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. He was 84.

Born April 19, 1902 in Memphis, Tenn., he served in the U.S. Navy in World Wars I and II. He was a builder-investor for 40 years and owned the Piney Woods Lodge in Carmel. He had been a Carmel resident since 1936, having moved to the peninsula area from Montecito.

Survivors include his wife, Amalie; two daughters, Marianne Gillette of Baltimore and Liane Gillette Vane of El Paso, Texas; a son, Ward of Carmel; and five grandchildren.

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea, followed by scattering of ashes at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula or to the oncology ward at Community Hospital.

Ethel G. Hatton

Private family services took place for Ethel Gertrude Hatton, a former Carmel resident for 20 years, who died Feb. 21 at Driftwood Convalescent Hospital in Davis. She was 93.

Born Dec. 7, 1893 in Portland, Maine, she was the widow of Leonard Hatton, who was known as Duke. He was a peninsula auto dealer many years ago.

She lived at the Park Lane in Monterey before moving to Davis last month.

Survivors include her son, Peter, and his wife, Betty of El Macero, and three grandchildren.

Following cremation, ashes were scattered at Point Lobos.

Robert Ira King

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove for Robert Ira King of Pebble Beach, who died Feb. 27 at Community Hospital. He was 62.

Born Aug. 23, 1924 in Los Angeles, he received a bachelor's degree from the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, a master's degree from Stanford University and a doctorate from the University of San Francisco.

He was an industrial psychologist and engineer for 35 years with Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. Inc. in Sunnyvale. He retired in 1985, and moved to Pebble Beach from San Jose last November.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge of Torrance, the Islam Temple of the Shrine of San Francisco and the Scottish Rite Consistory of San Jose. He was the author of several textbooks and technical manuals on engineering and was an authority on high-speed machining.

Survivors include his wife, Donna; a daughter, Kimberly K. Ernst of San Jose; a son, George of Fresno; his mother, Loveta N. King of San Jose, and two grandchildren.

At his request, no services took place. Cremation was under the direction of the Paul Mortuary.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

George K. Payne

Private services have taken place for George K. Payne of Carmel who died March 1 in San Francisco. He was 75.

Born May 23, 1911 in Springville, N.Y., he was raised in East Orange, N.J., studied at the Art Students' League in New York City and later moved to Washington, D.C.

During World War II he served in Naval Intelligence, creating terrain model maps for invasion purposes. He was display director at Woodward and Lothrop, a department store in Washington, D.C., where he was employed for 32 years. He was also the author of the book Creative Display.

He retired to Carmel in 1970 and was a member of First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Carmel.

Survivors include his wife, Frances; a son, George Jr. of Annandale, Va.; a daughter, Joan Stotler of Carmel; and six grandchildren.

At his request, no other services took place.

Murle F. Ogden

Memorial services took place March 4 at the First Presbyterian Church in Bandon Ore. for Murle F. Ogden, a photographer who had a studio in Carmel for more than 25 years, who died March 1 at St. Catherine's Nursing Home in Coos Bay, Ore. He was 82.

Born Oct. 6, 1904 in Hartford, Conn., he worked for many portrait photographers on the East Coast before taking over his brother's studio in the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu during the late 1930s. He opened his own studio in Carmel after World War II and was a businessman until his retirement in 1972.

He and his wife, Evelyn, then moved to Bandon, but he continued to visit the Carmel area each year after his retirement.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a son, Richard of San Francisco; two sisters, Vioris Brown and Varian Rice of Hartford, Conn.; and three grandchildren.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Are we bigots?

Carmel Rotary, La Playa Hotel

March 17, 1983 The Carmel Pine Cone/CV Outlook

Noel Sullivan was a kindly man who was descended from two of the old San Francisco families. He lived in Carmel Valley where the Carmel Valley Manor has been built. He also gave the chapels to the Carmelite Monasteries here and at Santa Clara.

He told me that many years ago on a cold and rainy night he picked up a young hitchhiker on Highway 101 outside San Francisco, who was bound for Los Angeles. Noel usually turned off at Prunedale but he drove to Salinas and bought the young man a bus ticket to Los Angeles.

During the drive, the young man told Noel that all the evils of America were caused by Catholics, Jews and blacks and that he was going to join the Klu Klux Klan. On parting, Noel said: "The man who gave you a lift and bought your bus ticket is a Catholic, my father, a Jew and my mother, a black — God bless you."

Daniel O'Connell once said in the British House of Commons: "Bigotry has no head and cannot think; no heart and cannot feel. When she moves it is in wrath; she pauses in the midst of ruin; she prays not but curses; she communes only with death."

How much of Archie Bunker's philosophy is in our lives? An honest examination might surprise us. Amen.

Seniors offered free check-ups

Free health check-ups for older adults will be offered by the SCANS (Senior Citizen and Nursing Services) program of the Monterey County Health Department. Persons over age 55 are eligible for this service.

Appointments are required for the check-ups, which are offered in Carmel at the Presbyterian Church, Ocean and Junipero avenues. To make an appointment, call 899-4271.

Students collect used magazines for prisoners

During the Lenten season, the third and fourth-grade Sunday religious education classes at the Carmel Mission, are collecting used magazines for men and women in prison.

The students will sort the magazines and remove labels. There will be a box at the office door of MacMahon Center to receive donations.

For information, call Mrs. Joan DeStefano at 624-6846.

Free subscriptions

If you are a Northern California resident who is blind or visually impaired, you can receive a free monthly subscription to The Lighthouse Lantern, by calling (415) 431-1481.

The Lantern is published monthly by the Lighthouse for the Blind and Visually Impaired. It lists recreational and educational opportunities, as well as special services available to young and old.

The Lantern comes in large print, in braille and on returnable cassette tape.

If you or someone you know is interested in subscribing, call The Lighthouse for the Blind and Visually Impaired at (415) 431-1481, or write 1155 Mission Street, San Francisco 94103.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"Diseases and disabilities are not inevitable consequences of the aging process," says Dr. J. Michael McGinnis, director of the U.S. Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion. In the booklet "Behavior Patterns and Health," produced by the National Institutes of Health, Dr. McGinnis lists "ten commandments for healthy living" to help us reach the goal of anthropologist Ashley Montagu — to "die young at as old an age as possible."

McGinnis' "ten commandments" are: don't smoke; limit alcohol consumption; practice moderation in diet and maintain an ideal weight; ensure adequate nutrients and fiber; avoid eating too much fat, especially saturated fat and cholesterol; limit salt intake; reduce sugar consumption; take extended daily walks or do 30 minutes exercise three or four times a week; know your stress levels and seek involvement with other people; and get seven to eight hours of sleep a night.

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

Modeling for the future

IMAGINE IT'S another sunny spring day in the year 2014. Sunny days have become commonplace as rainfall in three of the past five years has been below average. You and your friends are concerned about water and rain...

"Is there enough water in the new San Clemente Dam to carry us through the summer without rationing? I sure hope they built that thing big enough."

"What if it doesn't rain much next year as well. Then what?"

"How about those young steelhead in the river? Will there be enough water to sustain them too?"

As part of its long-term planning, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District already asks these and many other "what if" questions about future water supply and demand relationships. The powerful tool we use to answer them is a computer program called CVSIM, the Carmel Valley Simulation Model. It mathematically represents the physical dynamics of the Carmel Valley watershed, based on reams of historical data and measurements. It then tells us how well our water resources would perform if the weather conditions in the 28-year period between the years 1957 and 1985 were repeated. Fortunately, these years include the worst drought on record (1976-77) as well as different patterns of dry years.

"WHAT IF"

The results from the computer model are used in many important water management decisions. For example, how large should we size the new San Clemente Dam to provide enough water for our projected population in the year 2020?

To answer this question, we must first determine how much water demand is associated with that population in wet and dry years. What level of conservation should we assume? What surface and ground water supplies that would be available in a severe drought? State and federally required streamflow releases for fish and environmental health must also be considered, as must ground water storage reserves. Several policy decisions come into play, including the level of risk to drought we are willing to assume, and the severity of rationing we are willing to endure in a critically dry situation.

The situation can become very complex quite quickly when one considers all the potential scenarios that could occur. That's where a computer model comes to the rescue. We can input data such as projected municipal demand in a selected year, a certain rationing policy, a specific reservoir size, and see what the printer spits out for every day of the 28 years. In addition to determining municipal supply, the computer provides us with information on how streamflow, ground water storage, and other factors would be affected. Truly impressive!

CALIBRATION AND FINE TUNING

Now some of you computer whizzes out there may be thinking, "Yes, but how do we know whether this information is accurate? You know the old saying, 'Garbage in, garbage out,' when it comes to computers!"

This is where "calibration" comes into play. Calibration is a formal testing procedure that indicates how well the events simulated by the model match what actually happened during selected water years. If the simulated values are close to the actual measured values, the computer model can be confidently used as a management tool. If not, it's back to the field to test our assumptions about the physical processes in the watershed.

I am pleased to tell you that our calibration results look great! Kudos to Darby Fuerst, our senior hydrologist, and resident computer troll, who has spent innumerable midnight hours at the Naval Postgraduate School computer center. And thank you Uncle Sam for the use of your facilities.

So what does a successful calibration mean to us? First and foremost, the model can be confidently used to size the project, assess fishery impacts, sediment transport and beach replenishment for the new San Clemente Project EIR/EIS. We can now provide the technical documentation to justify our conclusions to the state and federal agencies the review our EIR/EIS. After more refinement, it can be used to support decisions on water allocation and water rights.

In the near term, the board will be conducting workshops in April to provide policy guidance on rationing and fishery issues to incorporate into the model for the EIR/EIS. We anticipate that final EIR/EIS-related output will be ready in early May. I'll be sure to keep you informed along the way!

Addiction intervention workshop set

Family and friends of someone with a drug or alcohol problem can help the addicted person to recovery through a professionally arranged intervention.

A free workshop to explain how friends or family can confront the alcoholic or addict in a caring way will be conducted from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 24 at the Community Hospital Recovery Center, 576 Hartnell St., Monterey.

All interventions at the Recovery Center are offered as a free public service. For more information, call 373-0924.

Trio dell'Arte joins county symphony for all-Beethoven concerts

THE MUSIC of Ludwig Van Beethoven will be featured during the upcoming concert series of the Monterey County Symphony. The symphony will be joined by Trio dell'Arte, playing Beethoven's Triple Concerto for Violin, Cello and Piano. Concerts are scheduled Sunday through Tuesday, March 22-24, in Monterey, Carmel and Salinas.

Pianist Grace McFarlane, a native of Jamaica, became a fellow of Trinity College, London, and the Licentiate of the Royal Schools of Music, two of the highest honors in performance conferred in the United Kingdom outside of England. She has also received the Prime Minister's Trophy of Excellence and was recently appointed to the piano faculty at the University of Maryland.

Violinist Donna Tecco is a graduate of the University of Indiana where she studied with Josef Gingold. She was awarded the Eugene Ormandy Prize in Philadelphia and won the Zathureczky and Marek-Weber Awards at Indiana University. As a teacher of both violin and chamber music, she is now on the faculty of the Peabody Institute. She performs on a 1683 Stradavarius.

Performing on a 1720 Matteo Gofriller, cellist David Szepessy enjoys a career both as a performing artist and a teacher. After graduation from Indiana University where he studied with Janos Starker and Fritz Magg, he spent two seasons with the Pittsburg Symphony including a three-month State Department tour of Europe and the Middle East. He later become solo cellist with the Columbia Artists Chamber Orchestra. Szepessy is currently on the faculty of Peabody Institute.

In addition to the Triple Concerto, Maestro Clark Suttle will conduct the orchestra in the Overture to Fidelio and the "Pastorale," Symphony No. 6 in F Major.

Sunday, March 22, the concert will take place at King Hall, Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey; Monday, March 23 at Sunset Theater, Carmel; and Tuesday, March 24 at Sherwood Hall, Salinas. All performances begin at 8 p.m.

JOINING THE Monterey County Symphony in its upcoming All Beethoven Concert is Trio dell'Arte. The musicians are, from left, Grace McFarlane, piano; Donna Tecco, violin, and David Szepessy, cello. Concerts are scheduled in Monterey, Carmel and Salinas, from Sunday through Tuesday, March 22-24. For ticket information, call 624-8511.

For ticket information call the symphony office at 624-8511. Prices range from $4.50 to $13. Single tickets are available at Abinante in Monterey; Do Re Mi in the Barnyard, Carmel; and Gadsby's and Sherwood Hall Box Office in Salinas.

Chesley Bonestell paintings auctioned at MIRA benefit

PAINTINGS DRAWN from more than 60 years of work by the late Chesley Bonestell will be auctioned Saturday, March 21 as a benefit for the Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy (MIRA). The silent auction is part of a reception scheduled 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the Gallery of Who's Who in Art, Carmel, exclusive representatives of Bonestell's work.

The sale will help to establish the Chesley Bonestell Memorial Lecture, which was organized by MIRA to honor this foremost space artist and long-time Carmel resident. Bonestell died last year at age 98.

Chesley Bonestell continued to paint until he was into his 90s, but his interest in art began early. In a 1984 interview, Bonestell told Anne Papineau of the Carmel Pine Cone, "I started at age 5. I drew a picture of my grandmother and my grandfather said, 'Don't let her see it.' "

Bonestell continued his sketching nonetheless, but was persuaded to pursue the more practical field of architecture when he entered Columbia University. After graduation he was to work on such diverse projects as the Sunol Water Temple, the Hallidie Building in downtown San Francisco and the Filoi estate in Woodside.

In a career punctuated by travel, Bonestell worked as an artist with the Illustrated London News during the 1920s and in New York he began a working partnership with William van Alen, whom he called "the best of the modern architects of the period." The duo contributed to the design of the art deco-inspired Chrysler Building in Manhattan.

Always a traveler, Bonestell first visited Carmel in the early years of this century.

"There was one hotel, wooden sidewalks. I think you had to chase over to Pacific Grove to get your vegetables," he recalled.

During the depression years of the 1930s, architectural assignments grew scarce. Bonestell then began a new career as a matte artist for Hollywood films.

His highly detailed paintings on glass served as realistic backgrounds for such classic works as How Green Was My Valley, The Hunchback of Notre Dame with Charles Laughton, Citizen Kane and The Fountainhead.

From the age of 10, Bonestell devoured books on astronomy and studied the evening sky. His fascination with astronomy culminated in the artistic genre for which he was most noted: images of outer space.

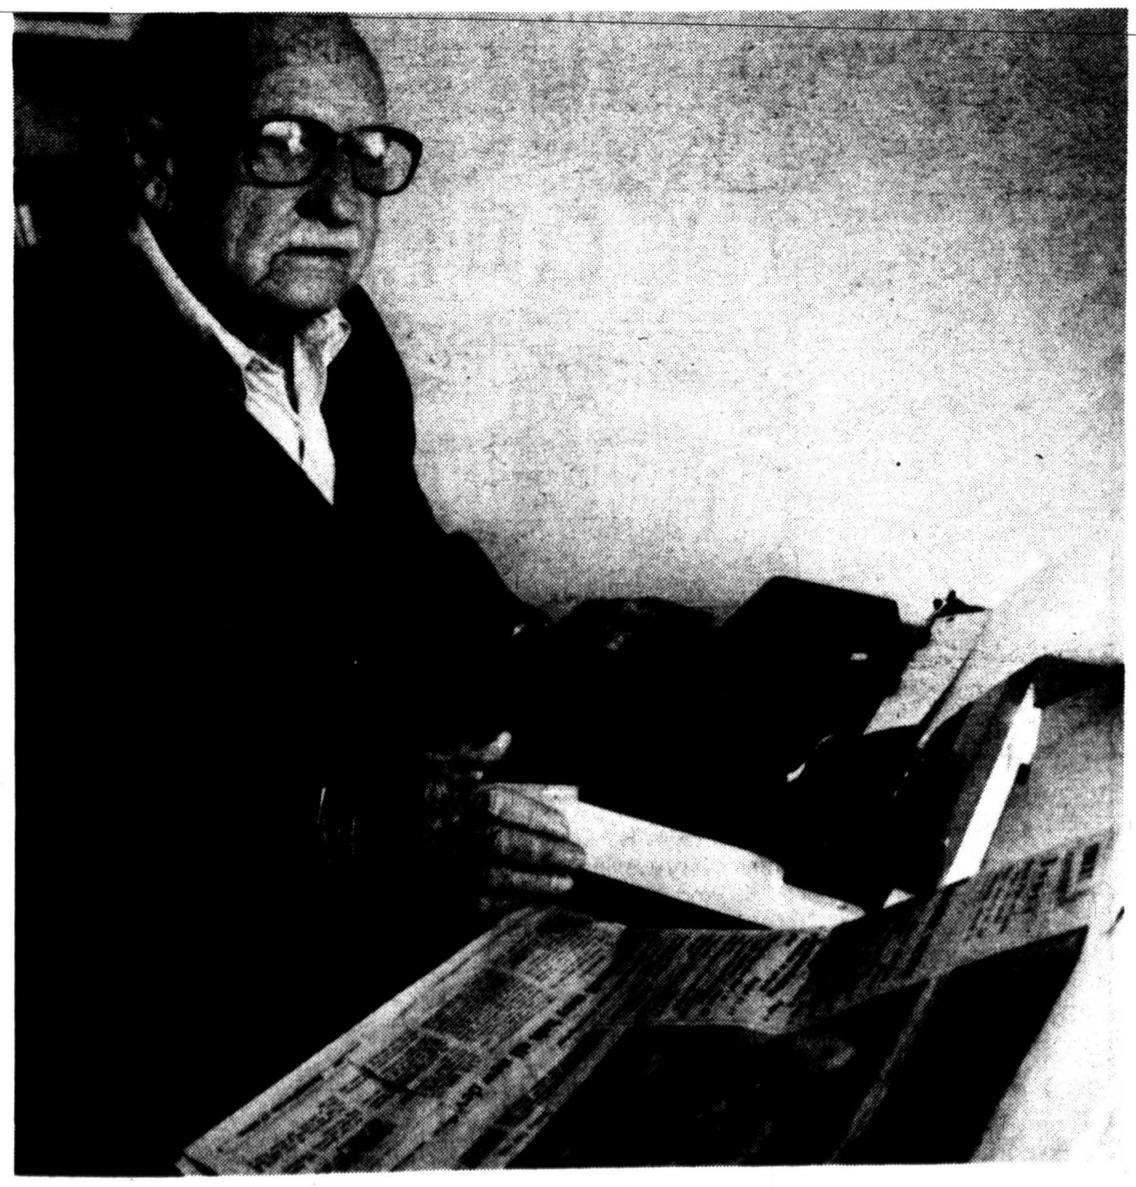
"There was a lot of interest after the war in space travel," Bonestell told the Pine Cone. He collaborated with Willy Ley, a founding member of the German Space Travel Society, and incorporated Ley's designs for space stations and rockets into his planetary pictures.

Together they produced The Conquest of Space (1949), now regarded as a classic. The book contained 48 Bonestell paintings. He was also commissioned to "paint outer space" for books by Wernher von Braun, Robert S. Richardson and Arthur C. Clarke, among others.

The motion picture industry continued to turn to Chesley Bonestell for images of planets yet to be explored. He painted them with chilling realism according to the descriptions of leading scientists. Paintings by Bonestell provide the framework for such classic science fiction movies as War of the Worlds, Conquest of Space and Destination Moon.

The diversity of Bonestell's artistic vision will be reflected in Saturday's benefit auction. The paintings, completed between 1924 and 1984, embrace such themes as fantasy, space, animal, architectural, Asian and futuristic.

The Gallery of Who's Who in Art is located at Dolores and Fifth in Carmel. For more information, contact MIRA at 624-9267 or the gallery at 625-0724.



SYDNEY TEMPLE, a retired professor of language, has turned his attention to documenting the history of Carmel Mission and has now published a comprehensive history of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Temple will autograph copies of his new book, Carmel-by-the-Sea: From Aborigines to Coastal Commission, on Saturday, March 21. (Holly McFarland photo).

Sydney Temple's new book relates history of Carmel-by-the-Sea

CONSULTING issues of the Carmel Pine Cone published from 1915 to the present and interviewing long-time residents, Sydney Temple has compiled his newest book, Carmel-by-the-Sea: From Aborigines to Coastal Commission.

The retired professor of language and literature will autograph copies of the history during a reception scheduled 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Saturday, March 21 at the Thunderbird Bookstore in The Barnyard, Carmel.

In 1980 Temple wrote a history of Mission San Carlos Borromeo which was published as The Carmel Mission: From Founding to Rebuilding. Extensive research also went into that project, for which Temple conducted extensive interviews with mission restorer Sir Harry Downie.

Temple makes his home in Carmel with his wife, Marguerite, who served as editorial assistant for Carmel-by-the-Sea, From Aborigines to Coastal Commission. A graduate of UCLA, he wrote his doctoral thesis at Columbia University on William White, chaplain of the Continental Congress in Philadelphia. Temple was later named curator of Revolutionary and Civil War manuscripts at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va. After teaching at the University of Massachusetts, Huron College of the University of Western Ontario and the University of Hawaii, he retired to Carmel in 1976.

Temple's newest book also incorporates a variety of photographs that document changes and growth in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The softcover book is priced at $9.95. For additional information about the publication, call 625-1249.

THEATER REVIEW

By Jean Thurman

Kaye Ballard generates warmth, humor

KAYE BALLARD is a very funny lady. She can also sing, play the flute, do impressions, and tug on your heartstrings, but it's her comedic talents that make her show Hey Ma ... Kaye Ballard such a success. We have Mikel Pippi and the Frohman Academy to thank for bringing her to Monterey's New Wharf Theatre.

Hey Ma ... is a combination of the story of Kaye Ballard's life and struggles in show business, and a showcase of her talents. The one-woman show starts with an introduction to Kaye's family — her father, her mother who thinks nice girls don't belong in show business, and her wonderful Italian grandmother, Nana. Nana makes spaghetti sandwiches for her granddaughter to make sure she won't get T.B. She protects her from the wrath of her parents and gives her advice like, "never show your legs onstage."

Ballard's affection for her grandmother and desire for her mother's approval are the keys to her heart. She openly shows us how hurt she was when her mother said she was too fat and plain for show business, then how happy she was when her mother finally said she liked Kaye onstage.

The show isn't all sentiment and family history though. Most of it is songs from her shows ("Always, Always You" from Carnvial, "Lazy Afternoon" from The Golden Apple) and bits from her nightclub act.

Her singing is Broadway-style, brash and melodic, and the songs are a mixture of the familiar and the obscure, plus a few personalized songs especially written for the show by David Levy and Leslie Eberhard. The show would be pleasant, but forgettable, however, if it weren't for the comedy.

Ballard does great impressions — an affectionate parody of Judy Garland singing her unforgettable tribute to Clark Gable, "You Made Me Love You;" a bizarre impression of Bette Davis in an Italian movie, and a one-second impression of Joan Crawford.

Ballard parodies herself best of all, with her recreation of a Broadway audition where she is supposed to look seductive but funny. She shows us how she started out, playing the flute and tuba for Spike Jones. I never knew playing the flute could be so funny!

The best part of the show was the excerpts from her nightclub act, making me long to see the entire production. She tells good jokes, bad jokes, silly jokes, ones that you want to remember but know you'll forget. She does her lightning quick impressions here and has a running patter with her pianist, Darren Cohen, who is also the musical director.

Cohen is an excellent accompanist, but needs to speak up and get his timing down for the patter. Too often he tried to speak over a line or laugh, and his line was lost.

The show is staged on an all-black set with minimal set pieces representing the childhood home, a theater, and a nightclub. A screen in the middle of the set displays slides in the best use of multi-media staging I have seen.

Hey Ma ... Kaye Ballard was in Monterey one weekend only, and closed Sunday, March 15. If you missed it, that's a shame, because Kaye Ballard is one funny lady.

Pianist Corbett-Jones appears

Community Services of Monterey Peninsula College presents an encore recital by classical pianist William Corbett-Jones at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 22 in the MPC Music Hall.

Corbett-Jones has recently returned from an extensive concert tour of Europe. Peninsula residents will recall his keyboard presentations in three Chopin Recital Programs at MPC, playing most of the major works of Chopin interspersed with insightful commentaries.

For this program, Corbett-Jones will play works by Mozart, Grieg, Listz and Chopin. Some selections include Sonata in B flat Major, K. 570, Fantasy, Op. 17, Sonata in E minor, Op. 7, Nocturne in D flat Major, Op. 27 No. 1.

Corbett-Jones is a professor of music at San Francisco University and has been a soloist with orchestras in the United States, Europe and Asia. He toured as the pianist with the Alma Trio for eight years. He has performed concert recitals in most major world capitals, played with the Lausanne and Winterthur Orchestras, and performed for the BBC, Hilversum, Cologne, Paris, Brussels and Istanbul radio, and appeared at festivals such as Salzburg and Meiringen.

Admission to the concert is $7 and tickets are available at the door.

'Faces of Change' films document international strife

POLITICALLY TROUBLED areas around the world are the focus of a collection of newly released films to be screened in Monterey this weekend, March 20-22.

Amnesty International, the International Development Council and the Monterey Institute International Film Series co-sponsor the six-film series, titled "Faces of Change."

Dwight Marshall, who helped coordinate the series, describes these movies as "very vital films. They offer a very close look at hot spots, places in the world of critical interest. There is death in some of these films, because rapid change in these countries is often accompanied by violence."

Schedule of films in the Faces of Change program is as follows:

March 20

■ Philippines: The Price of Power is a 28-minute documentary produced in 1986. The film shows how poverty, corruption and lack of political freedom alienated an ever-growing number of Filipinos, led to the fall of Marcos and the assumption of the presidency by Corazon Aquino. Jeffrey Chester and Charles Drucker produced the film.

■ Celso and Cora won best feature documentary at the 1983 Chicago Film Festival, 1984 first prize at the British Royal Anthropological Institute and other awards. The 1983 production by Gary Kildea tells of a young couple and their two children living in a squatter settlement in Manila.

March 21

■ Sweet Country, a 1986 documentary by Juan-Andres Racz, offers the most comprehensive and up-to-date survey of Chile today. In the film General Pinochet, a state security agent, the mother of a disappeared prisoner and an exiled political leader are interviewed to illustrate the meaning of Chile's "national security doctrine" through their own experiences.

■ The Two Rivers is a 1985 film by Mark Newman and Edwin Wes. It travels from the political, economic and cultural background to the tensions and torments of South Africa today. It garnered awards at the 1986 Berlin Film Festival, Chicaco Black Light Film Festival, Festival Cinema du Reel and the Newark Black Film Festival, among others.

March 22

■ People of No Interest, a 1984 documentary, was produced by Peter Flemington and Christian Paludan in association with Religious Television Association (Canada) and Danchurchaid (Denmark). This film examines how enormous economic development projects, financed and supported by the Brazilian government, play havoc with the lives of subsistence peasants who have been forced off the land and into the slums (favelas) in and around the cities.

■ Bombay: Our City is the focus of a 1985 film by Anand Pat Wardham. The film tells the story of the daily battle for survival of the four million slum dwellers of Bombay who make up half the city's population. Denied city utilities like electricity, sanitation and the water supply, many slum dwellers also face the constant threat of eviction as city authorities carry out campaigns to "beautify Bombay."

All films will begin at 8:15 nightly at Morse Auditorium, Monterey Institute of International Studies, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. Admission is $7 for the entire series, or $3.50 per evening ($3 for students).

Marshall said that the organizers of the series hope to make it a monthly event.

"We think these are really exciting films," he noted. "They represent what is going on in a lot of developing countries in the world, countries that are in the news every day. Documentaries generally speaking don't draw too many people. Some of our best filmmakers are now making them. These are films with traditionally very little marketplace, but they need to be shown. It's difficult to see them outside a major city."

AN IGOROT woman turned guerrilla fighter appears in Philippines: The Price of Power. The film, which provides a timely look at the current political turmoil in the Philippines, will be screened as part of the Faces of Change film series in Monterey.

Mastersingers captivate audience

THE MONTEREY PENINSULA Concert Association presented an outstanding concert at Pacific Grove Middle School on Friday, March 13. In a variety of music, the Slovenian Mastersingers of Yugoslavia captivated a sizeable audience.

Starting with the late Renaissance composer Orlando di Lasso, and proceeding into the 20th century, the double quartet was simply wonderful. Technically, there was nothing to fault. The blend and intonation were exemplary, the dictation in the languages I could understand was clear, so I assume it was in the others as well. Articulations were almost unbelievable.

Two pieces from the Renaissance Top 40 opened: "Bon jour mon coeur" by di Lasso and "Il est bel et bon" by Passereau. The latter calls for some very light and fast articulation which was excellent.

It is different to single out pieces — each listener surely had his or her favorite. The Haydn serenade "Liebes Maedchen, hor mir zu" was my personal favorite, but there was also a lovely setting of Grieg's "Solvejg's Song," and an interesting piece by Rachmaninoff.

Of particular interest was the overview of 19th and 20th century music from various parts of Eastern Europe. This part of the world has a very old musical tradition, but we hear very little of it aside from a few piano pieces of the late 18th century. Bass parts go very low and the resultant sonorities are marvelous.

As a closing group, the Mastersingers sang folk songs of Italy, Russia, Canada and a couple of spirituals.

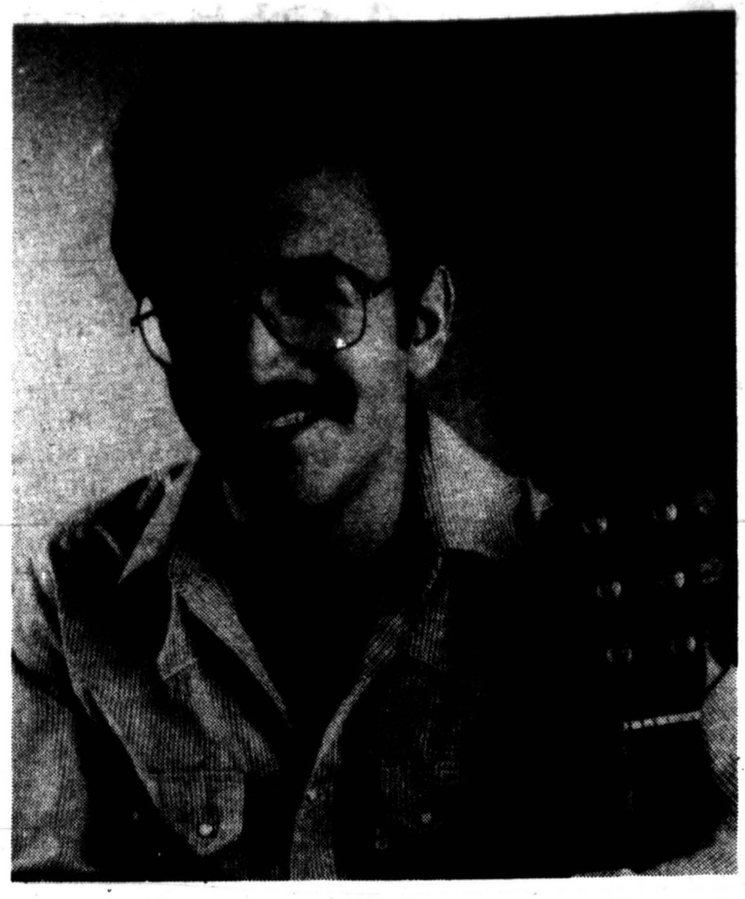
Everything was sung from memory, so the singers always had direct contact with the audience. Much memorization is either a habit, a rule, a fetish or a personal choice, but for singers it really makes a difference, increasing the intimacy by removing an obstacle.

•

UNDER THE auspices of the Chamber Music Society, the Ridge String Quartet appeared at Sunset Center on Wednesday, March 11. The program itself was interesting: Haydn, Bartok, Dvorak. The quartet is young — in age and in years of existence — and it doesn't yet have a personality. Everything was rather pale.

Despite the three very distinct styles, there was little appreciable difference in sound from one quartet to the next. Only in the Dvorak Quartet, Op. 51, did they seem truly engaged in the music, and even then only sporadically.

Well — it is late in the season. Maybe everyone is tired.



FORMER NATIONAL flatpicking champion Orrin Star will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 21 in Cherry Hall. The theater is located at Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel. For reservations, call 624-7491.

Guitarist Orrin Star to perform, lead workshop

THE CHERRY FOUNDATION will present former national flatpicking champion Orrin Star in a spirited concert of country swing tunes, bluegrass guitar and wry humor at 8 p.m., Saturday, March 21.

Combining the humor of a folk entertainer and the drive of a bluegrass instrumentalist, Star has become highly regarded in folk circles throughout the United States and Europe.

In 1976 at age 21, he achieved national notice by winning the National Flatpicking Championship, the largest bluegrass contest in the country.

Since then, Star has performed with banjo great Bill Keith and formed a duo with Gary Mehalick that lasted eight years. Star and Mehalick have toured throughout the United States and Europe and made two albums for Flying Fish label.

Star, who was described by the Boston Globe as "one of the finest flatpicking guitarists in captivity," is equally well-versed on the banjo, dulcimer and mandolin.

Star, who resides in Cambridge, Mass., will also teach a workshop on guitar arrangment for flatpicking and instrument selection beginning at 2 p.m., March 21, at Cherry Hall.

"This workshop will illuminate the craft and playful process of deciding how to best present a song. What instrument to use. How should they be played. Should there be one harmony, vocals or several," Star says.

Admission for the afternoon workshop is $20. The 8 p.m. concert is $6 general admission, $4 for students, seniors and the military, and $1 for children.

The Cherry Foundation, a non-profit organization serving the experimental arts, sciences and education, is located at Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. For more information and reservations, call 624-7491.

Writer's Jamboree returns

Unless Ray Mungo is a little more careful he may have to give up writing for another profession: promoting and organizing the Writer's Jamboree, which has now become a semi-annual event.

Just last fall Mungo and his partner Robert Yamaguchi, editor and publisher, respectively, of Creative States magazine, launched the first Writer's Jamboree, which featured standing-room-only seminars on writing and publishing and a wild writers' bash that featured appearances by novelists Jessica Mitford, Danny Santiago, James and Jeanne Wakatsuki Houston, former Mother Jones magazine editor Mark Dowie, poet William Minor, and a variety of novelists, poets, editors, journalists, and other writers and would-be writers.

The highlight of the evening was the appearance of the Writers' Jambo Band with Mungo himself belting out his own unique version of All of Me wrapped in a borrowed white feather boa.

Now, less than four months later Mungo and cohorts are at it again. Just when you thought it was safe to venture out of the library: Jambo II.

"Tools for the Working Writer" is the official title of the second Writers' Jamboree, to be presented Saturday, March 21 at the Monterey Sheraton. "Jumbo Jambo" is the insiders' moniker for what organizers promise to be bigger and better than last year's extravaganza.

As in the first jamboree there will be seminars on writing and publishing; the day culminates in a social gala at 7 p.m. at the Three Flags Restaurant at the Monterey Sheraton. The Writers' Jambo Band is again scheduled to provide "entertainment."

Heading the list of writers this time are Don Pendleton, author of 100 novels in the Mack Bolan Executioner series; Maxine Hong Kingston; Robert Gover, best-selling author of The $100 Misunderstanding; Gerald Rosen, author of Blues for a Dying Nation; and Thomas Farber, author of Curves of Pursuit and Who Wrote the Book of Love. A few surprise guests are also promised.

Professional seminars will be offered from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., featuring editors and authors from San Francisco, Los Angeles and other parts of the country. The jamboree is sponsored by and is a benefit for Creative States, a non-profit publication headquartered in Carmel.

The following seminars are scheduled:

• Desktop publishing: 9 a.m. to 10:45 a.m., with Robert Baker, director of research and development, Lifetree Software; Susan Bock, associate editor, Monterey Life magazine; Jonathan Drake, editor, Prelude magazine; Robert H. Yamaguchi, publisher, Creative States Quarterly.

• Writing for Love and Money: Seminar for newspaper and magazine writers, 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. With Walter Bowart, editor, Palm Springs Life and Guest Life; Susan Brenneman, editor, Image magazine, San Francisco Examiner; George Fuller, editor, Monterey Life magazine; Donald George, travel editor, San Francisco Examiner.

• Lit Biz 101: Making a Living Writing Books, 2 to 3:45 p.m. With Nancy Mairs, author of Plaintext; Alix Madrigal, assistant book editor, San Francisco Chronicle; Jack Miles, book editor, Los Angeles Times; Ray Mungo, author of Famous Long Ago, Confessions from Left Field and editor of Creative States Quarterly.

• Getting Your Novel in Print, 4 to 5:45 p.m. With Thomas Farber, Don Pendleton, and Gerald Rosen, who also wrote The Carmen Miranda Memorial Flagpole, and Growing Up Bronx.

Fees for seminars are $10 each, $30 for all four, and $25 for senior citizens/students.

Admission to the Writers' Jamboree Social Gala is $15, $10 for students/senior citizens.

Admission to all four seminars plus the evening party is $40, $30 for senior citizens and students.

Tickets are available at Center Stage Ticketing or at the door on the day of the event. Seminar seating, however, will be limited to the first 75 people.

For additional information, call 649-5175.

Speaking poet Ric Masten appears for benefit of Big Sur Library

RIC MASTEN, one of the few poet performers who carries on the oral tradition in America, will appear in concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 21 at the Big Sur Grange on Highway 1. This performance will benefit the Friends of the Library, Big Sur.

Although he has nine books of poetry to his credit, Masten's work is written primarily to be spoken or sung. Since 1968 he has traveled across the country giving readings, concerts and workshops in colleges, churches, prisons and schools. He has been called "a roving humorist," a "street philosopher" and a "stand-up poet," and likened to Will Rogers, Pete Seeger and Ogden Nash. But his work is unique.

His poems, songs and stories speak to the human condition — the loneliness ("I'm not wavin', babe, I'm drownin'") and the joy ("Let it be a dance") — that everyone experiences in common. Masten's metaphor for human society is a hive of bees; he sees himself as "one of its voices." Going beyond mere entertainment, Masten seeks active communion with his audience. His favorite audience is made up of people who would normally regard an hour with a poet as cruel and unusual punishment.

Masten, a resident of Palo Colorado Canyon, makes this rare local appearance on behalf of the Friends of the Library to aid the campaign to enlarge the present Big Sur Library. A donation of $5 will be accepted at the door.

SPEAKING POET Ric Masten of Big Sur will recite from his works during a benefit for the Friends of the Library, Big Sur. The reading will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 21 at the Big Sur Grange Hall. Suggested donation is $5.

Annual Tor House garden party arrives May 9

The annual Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation garden party will take place noon to 4 p.m., May 9 at Tor House, 26304 Ocean View Ave., Carmel.

The English-cottage-style garden, Jeffers' home and Hawk Tower will be open to the public.

Docents will be on duty in the house and tower and volunteers will be on hand to answer garden questions.

Admission is $7, which will include refreshments. Tickets may be purchased at the garden gate on Ocean View Avenue. All proceeds will be utilized for the continuing preservation of Tor House, Hawk Tower and the gardens. No children under 12.

For further information, contact the Foundation office at 624-1813.

The Tor House Foundation is affiliated with the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

ART NOTES

By Sam Colburn

Liberation from realism

THE INVENTION of the camera and its rapid deployment removed the most obvious reason for representational painting. If man could get a literal image on a flat plane simply by taking a picture, then, for the purposes of advertising at least, he was released from the stricture of making "Things" look like they are. We still can't reproduce the optics of the human eye on a flat surface.

There were centuries of painting and drawing in which the work was not representational because man had not discovered the technique of perspective. Gradually representational art took over, perhaps reaching its climax in the School of the Academy. There is a world of great drawing and painting, however, which is concerned with this approach. Let us not forget Leonardo, Michelangelo, Rembrandt, and a few others.

This liberation from creating images of physical reality has blown off the lid on Art. It has also released techniques which unfortunately, at times, do nothing toward personal imagery of any importance. A man takes a stick, and makes a line in the dirt. This line may be seen as possessing mystique. There is a whole school of cast paper in Los Angeles. An artist may use half a dozen techniques and materials in a single work, but if his personal imagery is puerile what do you have? These are tricks without content.

The French made a movie called The Day of a Painter. Their satire is very acute. The artist, in this minor epic, goes out on a wharf and throws a great piece of masonite down on the mudflat underneath. Then he drops paint on this "canvas." As a final touch, he shoots a gunful on his masterpiece. Then he gets it up on the wharf, and saws it up into many pieces. A helicopter approaches and lands in the bay. It disgorges a man in a business suit, who gets up on the wharf. He selects a few choice pieces, and flys away. The artist throws what is left into the bay.

It is a time when technique may triumph over art.

•

DICK CRISPO is having a one-man show in the Beardsley Room at the Carmel Art Association. He is an artist who uses many techniques and materials, and his work has Form and Feeling. In this exhibit are oils, watercolors, mixed media and collage. I don't know of any artist whose inner eye involves a more complex imagery. There is a strangeness about the charcoal drawings. They are held together by serpentine forms. He uses photographs. The symbolism is fascinating, but I do not what it means. I like "Lady Ems Life."

There are a number of watercolors which are done with great swirls of color. The title of one is "Hurt and Angry." I do get the feeling from the painting, and I think that "Joyous Heat" is also well-named. There are figures trying to emerge in these aquarelles.

His painting called "Deliverance" is quite dark, but there is an inner luminosity which is of mysterious source. This light comes out in the two large oils, but the colors he used are not appealing. Again I would return to the surreal works which are very innovative — "Untitled No. 6" is simply charming. "Untitled No. 2" I find to be just dandy. I assume that the photograph used is one of the late Henry Miller who looks debauched. In "Alex Through the Looking Glass" there is light, mystery, and fun. Dick's show is announced in the showcase window. It is a collage entitled "No." The use of red, blue, and yellow is brilliant. If you go to see this exhibit, which will be on view through April 1, you will see a number of very small works, which to me, evidence a unique, quirky humor.

•

WE HAVE, happily enough, an institution on the peninsula that exhibits not only the art work of locals, but also paintings, drawings, sculpture, and photography from the outside world. This is the Pacific Grove Art Center. This is also true of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, but perhaps those exhibiting there are better known.

At present the Pacific Grove Art Center is showing the work of several artists. The hallways are devoted to the very spontaneous drawings of David Amland. I say drawings, perhaps the word should be paintings. In any event he uses waterproof ink, crayon, opaque watercolor, and pastel. He achieved his training at Augustana College, Sioux Falls, South Dakota; and at the University of Iowa. The work is loose and splashy, dramatic, but rather repetitious.

Down the hall in the David Gill Gallery Maude Church's one-woman show consists of oils, acrylics, and prismacolor. I thought that "Sunset 1" and "Sunset 2" in prismacolor had cohesion and were an effective use of the medium. Many of these pieces have very large areas of straight color. Somehow they seem purely illustrative of life on these golden shores. Maude Church teaches classes in art and the development of art.

Over in the Elmarie Dyke Gallery you will find the paintings of Joy Savage whose nudes are of deliberately exaggerated proportions. She creates form through color. The tonal values are close, but the shapes are there. Julie Smith exhibits a number of crayon drawings working from models. You will certainly recognize "Meg," and also "John."

Juli Kirk-Thompson has drawn some large charcoals. They have force. There are limbs, and other body parts, but I would say the abstract quality of the line and mass is what has intriqued her.

The photographic gallery is filled with the intriguing mixed media of Lucy Ash who taught chemistry for 26 years. The foundation is photograhic. The color is high and the content is surrealist. In some of the pieces forms and figures are painted in. I think her concepts are fun.

This exhibit at the art center will close on April 3.

•

THE TITLE of the show at the Monterey Bay Aquarium is "Sandy Beaches, Rocky Shores: Coastal Landscape Paintings." The subject matter is what has drawn artists here for so many years. The imagery presented is varied, both time and tide have their effect. It is quite a jump from Frank Duveneck to David Ligare's napkin flying over the beach on Asilomar. I thought William Ritschel's ocean and rocks to be a masterpiece of fine loose oil painting. These works will be on view through May 3.

DANCE WITH Despair, is a 1986 silver print/light drawing by Maria Gonzalez. Her exhibit, "You Never Know," opens Friday, March 20 at the Friends of Photography Gallery in Carmel.

Maria Gonzalez paints with light, film in new Friends exhibition

AN EXHIBITION of etchings and black and white photographs produced by Maria Gonzalez will open in the Friends of Photography Gallery at Carmel's Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, on Friday March 20. The exhibition will continue through April 26. Gonzalez will present a slide lecture on her work at 7:30 p.m., followed by an opening reception on Friday. The public is invited to attend both the lecture and reception without charge.

Maria Gonzalez initially pursued photography with an intent to enrich her career as a journalist. Her photographic educators supported an attitude of exploration with the process; and through this approach Gonzalez formed her unique visual vocabulary. She applied her fascination with story telling to the photographic medium to develop a visual synthesis of what is observed and imagined.

In her photographs Gonzalez references what she terms the dualities that exist between physical perception and concealed emotional conflicts. She explores what she calls "the dichotomy between what we perceive with our eyes and what is hidden in our hearts." In a format of combined drawings and lens-formed imagery, the photo image becomes the record and the drawing becomes an interpretation of an emotional state. Gonzalez' photographs and etcings exhibit scenarios of personal and interpersonal violence played out by a cast of personae who reveal various psychological states.

She suggests that "when mechanisms for dealing with inner torments, fears, memories, and insecurities break down, there are sometimes only violent solutions." *You Never Know...*is a phrase of caution chosen by Gonzalez to remind us of a reality that exists without physical evidence.

Gonzalez uses various photographic techniques to convey her narrative statement. Different prints are combined to create a story line and form one piece. Drawings are contact printed onto four-by-five-inch film and then enlarged onto mural paper, or pen light is used to draw directly onto the light sensitive paper. Negatives may be scratched or the paper fogged. Using negatives from a bank of images she has created from years of family archives and personal photographs, she works very slowly, making additions and deletions as the piece progresses.

This exhibition consists of prints from three series. Also included are early etchings establishing Gonzalez' thematic consistency and making apparent the influence of the printmaking process on her photographic work.

Maria Gonzalez holds a master's degree in creative photography from California University, Fullerton, and a bacherlor's degree from Barry College in Florida. She was a recipient of a Visual Artists Fellowship grant from the National Endowment for the Arts in 1982. In 1985 she received a second master's degree in library science from Indiana University. She currently resides in New Orleans.

Work by Carmel students shown in Monterey

"Portraits" is the theme of an exhibit opening Saturday, March 21 at the Calle Court Gallery in Monterey. The show will feature sculpture, paintings and pastels by students of the studio classes taught by Jeanne Fosnot.

The collection will feature paintings and drawings by Marjorie Muir, Jean Miller, Phyllis Johnson, Gloria Clayton, Gerrit Bevelander and Jean Alexander.

Sculptors represented in this collection are Jean Thomas, June Sheppard, Rod Mills, Phyllis Motoff, Marie Gilmore, Charlotte Davis and Mark Andrews.

Multiplicity of media featured in Dick Crispo collection at CAA

NEW PAINTINGS, drawings and collages by Dick Crispo, a member of the Carmel Art Association since 1965, are exhibited in the Beardsley Room of the CAA galleries through April 1. A reception for the artist is planned 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, March 20 in the galleries located on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel.

This show makes use of a "wide variety" of media, Crispo explained, including graphite, collage, acrylics and watercolors on Indian Village paper. After 20 years, Crispo is again able to use oil paints. An allergy to turpentine prohibited him from working in that medium, but a new turpentine-free mixture allows use of that evocative medium.

The works are abstract.

"I am taking my work farther and trying to open up new and special dimensions. I'm dealing with the fourth dimension and I'm dealing with time," he noted.

A portion of the proceeds of any sales will be donated to Beyond War and the New Forum, the artist added.

"I look at my art as playing on the intersections, not the squares," Crispo said. "When things cross, when ideas, people, objects and shapes cross, they cease to become static and are part of a bigger movement. Motion is important. I'm not interested in freezing a moment of time.

"This show deals primarily with spiritual concerns put into a visual space. When I speak of spiritual, I mean not as a religion but as a presence," Crispo said.

A MULTI-MEDIA collection of works by Dick Crispo is featured in the Beardsley Room of the Carmel Art Association, Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel. Proceeds of a Friday, March 20 sale of Crispo's work will benefit non-profit groups.

IT'S IN CARMEL...

BUT YOU HAVE to go to Pebble Beach to get to it! We're speaking of our newest listing, a fantastic homesite just inside the Carmel Gate. It's in a secluded, wooded area and offers wonderful golf course and ocean views. The wiring is underground and the sewer is in. It's an ideal site for the Carmel home you've always dreamed of having. $325,000.

AND IN PEBBLE BEACH...a little further on, near 17-Mile Drive and Crespi, a two-acre homesite that slopes gently down to the 13th tee of the Pebble Beach golf links. Views of the ocean across the green fairways. It's the last homesite in this area of well-established homes. Enjoy privacy amid surroundigs of unsurpassed natural beauty. $1,450,000.

LIVE AND WORK IN THE SAME PLACE

DOWNTOWN Pacific Grove...an attractive turn-of-the-century property with a store in front and a small apartment in the rear so you or your tenant can conduct a mom 'n' pop business. The apartment has a living room with fireplace, small bedroom, wee kitchen, and bath. The lot size is 30 by 60 feet. $189,000.

LOOKING FOR OFFERS

TWO COTTAGES...side by side in Pacific Grove...one just remodeled with new foundation, bath, copper pipes, and wiring, and the other with a newly painted exterior and great potential. Keep one cottage for yourself, and rent the other. $179,000.

EDWARDIAN DUPLEX

A TWO-UNIT building in Pacific Grove with great potential and some ocean view from the three-bedroom upper. The lower has two bedrooms, and there's a detached three-car garage. Nice period touches throughout but we had better be up front and tell you the property will need some TLC to bring out all its charm. $215,000.

THE MITCHELL GROUP

Atop Pfeiffer Ridge In The Big Sur Country

A pathway threads through oaks to reach the entrance deck of this shake-roofed, redwood home featuring fine craftsmanship, interior use of stone combined with native woods and window walls opening to another seaward-facing deck.

Running along the entire west side of the house, this deck provides outdoor enjoyment of panoramic view encompassing the Ocean, coastline and mountains of the Big Sur Country.

A skylight in beamed wood ceiling, paneled walls, floor of wide pine boards, window walls and stone fireplace are in the living room which extends into a compact kitchen with handcrafted cabinets topped by stone counters. Stone also backs the stove using propane gas. Off this central area, and with both floor and countertop of stone, the bathroom features a sunken tub in a windowed alcove permitting view of hills and ocean. The two carpeted bedrooms also are off the living room and have similar walls and ceiling as well as ample closets and built-in bookcases and bed platforms.

Electric power is provided by the solar panels located on the roof, also by a propane generator. Water comes from a mutual system and privacy is assured by a five-acre site reached by a weather-stabilized road inside a locked gate close to Highway One approximately 25 miles south of Carmel. Price of this restful haven amid hills sloping to the sea over which the sun sets in glowing glory is $225,000.

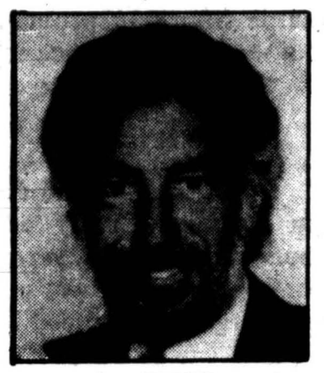
WELCOME...

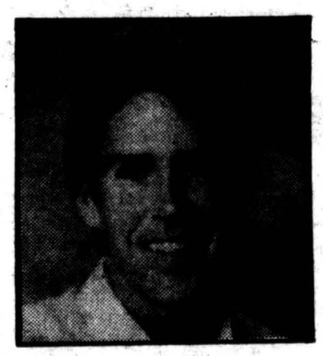


CHARLES BEREN

It is with pleasure that we announce the association of Charles Beren with Prestige Properties! He brings with him 10 years of local residential real estate sales experience along with a background in development of income, commercial and hotel properties. Married, with a son in Carmel High School, Charles has been active in such community programs as Special Olympics, Kiwanis Club Projects, The Gourmet Gala, as well as a long serving board member of Congregation Beth Israel. We invite you to contact Charles with your real estate questions and needs.

CAROLE COLTER

Carole, who grew up in Carmel Valley, is a 30 year resident of the Monterey Peninsula, and knows the area "like the back of her hand." You may remember Carole as a former director of the Carmel Youth Center. Previously a member of the Monterey Board of Realtors, she comes to Prestige Properties and has joined the Carmel Board of Realtors. She brings an enthusiasm and desire to listen to her client's needs and work hard on their behalf. Her hobbies are varied — from volleyball to gourmet cooking. (be sure to try her famous banana nut bread at her open houses!) We are happy to welcome Carole and anticipate a great future for her.



DAVID GLEASON

David, a lifelong Carmel resident, is a graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara. He comes to Prestige Properties with commercial real estate experience as a former member of the Monterey Board of Realtors. Currently a member of the Carmel Board of Realtors, David plans to expand his residential repertoire to better serve his clientele. David's limited leisure moments find him an accomplished sculptor. His experience, diligence and competence assure his success in locating the ideal properties for his clients — call David at 625-5300.

We've had some complaints about the SIZE OF OUR TYPE

A lady called us the other day. "My friend Irma," she said, "stole my magnifying glass (you can't trust Irma), and now I have trouble reading your ads." Of course we sent her a new glass immediately, a nice one with a walnut handle; but her complaint bothers us.

The problem is the castles and cottages and lots and lofts we write about are so fascinating we need a lot of words to describe them. We've tried doing it in verse, for brevity. We have hacked off whole paragraphs, deliberately destroyed every other adjective, and attempted to cover details with single buzzwords like "amenities" and "ambiance" and "contemporary", whatever that means.

It doesn't work. Somehow the charm is lost when we restrict ourselves to bare bones descriptions. Other realtors do it all the time; you know, "3 bedrooms, 2 bath," "near ocean," "south of Ocean Avenue," etc.

Maybe that's enough for them. But not for us. We think it's fun to "tour" a house, to move from room to room looking for traffic patterns, to spot surprising little touches (some of which we do not emphasize), to imagine what it would be like to live there.

Houses are a lot like people. Not everybody likes every house (which is fortunate), but somebody likes every house. That's why we go on about details, and our story gets too long and our type gets too small.

We have another magnifying glass if you need it. But you don't want us to change our style. Do you?

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 8

One of the enduring games played by residents of Carmel is "Why, I could have bought that place for "X" dollars back in 19xx!" Hardly anyone who's been here for more than 15 years has failed to play this game. But the all-time loser was a Frenchman named Honore Escolle who did, in fact, sell the square block on which CARMEL PLAZA now sits for $10 in 1893. Honore had come from France in 1852 at the age of 15. He started a bakery and general store in Monterey, but his real passion was ranching and cattle. He bought the wooded hills at what is now the north end of Carmel, but his cows were outflanked by the deer, so he sold it. We don't know that his sale of the site of CARMEL PLAZA, then 27 lots and now 50 thriving shops, was a distress sale, but by then Honore was in his late fifties, had 14 children, and may have felt some pressure. Let's see, the real estate commission would have been 60¢ then, maybe $600,000 now... "Why! We could have bought..."
